HOLIDAY SEASON SALE

Bought your pillows & comforters elsewhere? Guaranteed you overpaid!!!

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Re-Elect Santa

A Fable To Be Read Aloud To The Children Of The Hamptons On Christmas Eve

By Dan Rattiner

Every two hundred years the world holds an election to decide if we should replace Santa Claus. There was one two hundred years ago. Santa Claus beat back a challenge from Prince Poppy of Albania. But that was then. This year, the election was held on the first of December, just three weeks before Christmas.It was quite something. Oh, you were away? And you missed it? Well, I'll tell you about it.

On the one side, we had Happy Zappy Man, the challenger, a superhero with a blue cape and blue spangled boots. On the other side was Santa Claus. He's been in office a thousand years.

"Santa Claus has been in office long enough," said Happy Zappy Man, from his headquarters in Canada. "He's gotten fat and complacent, and he just brings the same old stuff. Rocking horses. Barbie Dolls. Toy trains. It's time for a change! This is the age of the Internet."

...Santa said he thought the children like the job he did. Or at least he hoped they did. He'd been doing it for a thousand years.

A huge crowd of 20,000, shivering in the snow outside Happy Zappy Man Headquarters in the city of Banff, waved signs reading DOWN WITH SANTA and roared with approval as the Happy Zappy Man spoke. No one knew it at the time, but the Happy Zappy Man had PAID these people to show up. It would come out later, though.

Santa Claus, of course, said he wouldn't campaign and didn't. If newspapermen or TV people wanted to speak with him, they'd have to come up to the North Pole to do so. He was too busy supervising the elves, and going through the book to see who had been a good little boy or girl or who had been bad. There'd only be three and a half weeks after the election until Christmas.

One reporter did get to the North Pole, though. Malcom P. Sulzberger III went by dog sled. And it took him four days. He returned to report, in a front-page

South O' the Highway (and North, too)

Bridgehampton's Bill Beutel is stepping down as anchorman at Channel 7 this January. He's one of the original anchors of Eyewitness News, which began in 1962. This past November, Beutel's Six O'clock News won the sweeps against all comers. Beutel's a champion from beginning to end. Now we'll get a chance to see him and his lovely wife Adair around more.

Calvin Klein continues waiting while his triplex penthouse in Richard Meier's twin towers on Perry Street completes its construction. Meanwhile, he has already turned down offers to buy the place, at a substantial profit. Not bad when you've bought a home for fifteen million or so. Incidentally, he reportedly will look across, when his apartment is completed, on a penthouse across the way owned by another East Hamptonite, Martha Stewart.

Arlene Dahl and her husband Marc Rosen threw a wonderful Christmas bash at their home the other day, and in attendance were many Hamptonites, including Elke and Ben Gazzara, Joan Rivers and John and Suzanne Mados, who own the Wyndham Hotel on 58th Street opposite the Plaza.

Lynn Forester, businesswoman extroardinare and former wife of Andrew Stein, has married Evelyn Rothschild, the English banking scion. They were reported by Liz Smith to have been guests of the Clintons at the White House after the nuptuals. Can you think of a better place to honeymoon?

The National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences will salute Montauk's Paul Simon as Man of the Year on February 19 in L. A. Among those wishing him well and performing at the occasion will be Hamptonites Sting and Marc Anthony and also former-Hamptonite Billy Joel.

Kim Cattrall of Sex in the City, who has been described as America's favorite nympho because that is how her part is written, is co-authoring a sex-guide book with husband Mark Levinson. Kim and Mark live in East Hampton.

The Cosmopolitan was the drink that ruled this past summer season. Guess what the new hot drink for these cold winter nights is? The Rob Roy, We remember when that was a hit at Bobby Van's twenty-five years ago.

Talk about twenty-five years ago...who out there used to attend the Rocky Horror Picture Show at the now defunct Hamptons Arts Theatre every Friday night at 12 a.m. with the crazy crowd there bringing umbrellas, toast and other household items to match the screens scenes.

article that appeared in The New York Times, that Santa was in high spirits. He met him in front of the workshop. And Santa said he thought the children liked the job he did. Or at least he hoped they did. He'd been doing it for a thousand years. And he really WAS going to get one million Play Station 2s delivered on Christmas Eve.

"Ha," Happy Zappy Man said when he heard about this. "Where's he going to get a million Play Station 2s? We've cornered the market on them. And we've cornered the market on cellphones, handhelds, laptops and Palm Pilots. And we've got new electronic stuff the kids haven't even heard of yet."

One of these devices, Happy Zappy "call me Happy" Man said, was an electronic beam that would allow him to deliver all the presents to all the children all over the world at the same time.

"We should have it ready, not for this Christmas but for next Christmas. And the Christmas after that, I'll have the electronic beam as a present for all," he said. "You kids won't even have to wait for Christmas morning to open your presents in front of your parents. You'll just have to beam yourselves up to me here in Banff, get your present, and beam yourself back home."

The election was scheduled, as always, to take place on December 1. Malcolm P. Sulzberger III, making a second trip to the North Pole, suffered frostbite on one of his toes, but reported that Santa Claus would abide by the results. He had everything in order. He could turn all his records and all the toys the elves made over to Happy Zappy Man in a matter of a day if that is what the people wanted.

"Bah!" Happy Zappy Man said when he heard this. "We won't need his records. We've got everything on computer. And we certainly won't need those dumb old toys."

The day after Thanksgiving though, polls came out that said the election was too close to call. There were countries that wanted all the new stuff and would vote for Happy Zappy Man.

"If Santa Claus has gotten fatter, as Happy Zappy Man says," said a boy from Armenia, "how is he even going to get down our chimney?"

And there were countries that were in favor of keeping Santa Claus.

"I want my Santa Claus," said a little girl from New Zealand.

"From what we can see," said a CNN reporter on television standing in front of a big map of the world, "it all depends on Happy Zappy Man's home country – Canada."

The countries of the world on the map were a checkerboard of red and blue – red for Santa, blue for Happy Zappy Man – and then there was Canada in yellow. "If Happy Zappy Man can win Canada, he will win the election."

Up at the North Pole, Malcolm P. Sulzberger III, who'd been injured on the arm by falling ice during his third trip up there, said the reindeer were all very

The National Anthem Of The Old Soviet Union Does Not Deserve To Die

By Dan Rattiner

When the old Soviet Union was out to spread Communism all around the world, they used everything they possibly could to demonstrate their strength and determination. One of those things, and I remember it well, was the Soviet National Anthem. In all the world, during the 1950s, 1960s, 1970s and 1980s, I heard it over and over again, on TV as the Russians stood on the top platform at the Olympics, gold medal draped around their necks, to military parades on May Day in Red Square. I also heard it, in all its grandeur and inspirational value, in a popular record album that came out here in America many years ago, sung by the Soviet Army Chorus. Like the Bolshoi Ballet, the Soviet Army Chorus was making the rounds of America and other foreign countries to show off their skills, and by implication, the superiority of Communism. Indeed, the Soviet Army Chorus was fabulous. And they could sing the Soviet National Anthem with a strength and power that was even better than that in the Notre Dame Fight Song. You'd hear it and you'd hum it for weeks afterward.

> I felt about this anthem, as a piece of music, the same way I felt about Frank Sinatra singing "New York, New York."

I mention this business about the Soviet Anthem because when the old Soviet Union collapsed back in 1991, what went down with it, besides the old Soviet flag with the hammer and sickle on a field of red, was this fabulous anthem. I felt bad about it. The anthem would go in the dumpster, never to be played again. I felt about this anthem, as a pure piece of music, the same way I felt about Frank Sinatra singing "New York, New York." Or Beethoven's Fifth Symphony. Imagine not ever hearing either of these ever again.

Along with some other people here in East Hampton, I helped numerous people get out of Moscow during that time. Many of them stayed at our house on Three Mile Harbor Road for a month or two. Although all of them acknowledged the power of that song, all of them, to a man, said they hated what it stood for. I agreed. But it was a hell of a tune.

Now it turns out that this anthem may rise from the dead. President Vladimir Putin has just announced a competition to choose a new anthem for modern Russia. It will replace a sort of piddly one chosen in 1992 by Boris Yeltsin that never caught on. And guess what? A survey of the people of modern Russia reveals that the leading contender is the old Soviet Union anthem. A full 49% of the people want it back, the melody anyway, with new lyrics. The song in second place is favored by only 18% of the population. There are six others in the running. All have fewer adherents than that. The Russian Parliament will make the final decision.

The history of the old Anthem of the Soviet Union is interesting. It was written by a Soviet Army Band Leader named Aleksandr Aleksandrov in 1944 at the behest of Stalin. When Stalin was revealed to be the murderous dictator he surely was by Premier Nikita Khruschchev in 1962, the references to Stalin in the lyrics were removed. Two years later, when Khruschev was overthrown, the new rulers of the Soviet Union decided to throw out the lyrics all together. They'd come up with new lyrics. But none were forthcoming. As a result, when the great Soviet athletes at the Olympics got to stand on that top platform to receive their gold medals — and they won more gold medals in those years than even those from the United States — all they could do when the Soviet anthem was played was put their hand over their heart and hum.

Finally, in 1977, the Soviet leaders came up with some new lyrics. They weren't bad. Here's the first verse and the main chorus.

Unbreakable Union of freeborn Republics,
Great Russia has welded forever to stand
Created in struggle by will of the people,
United and mighty, our Soviet land!
Sing to the Motherland, home of the free
Bulkwark of peoples in brotherhood strong
O Party of Lenin, the strength of the people
To Communism's triumph lead us on.

As we all know, in 1991, the unbreakable union broke. The Soviet Union collapsed. And in the place of this wonderful anthem was this tinkley dumb thing chosen by Boris Yeltsin — a sort of slow motion polka — written by the 19th century composer Glinka.

The problem came to a head in September at a ceremony in Moscow where Prime Minister Putin honored the Spartak Moscow soccer team. At the ceremony, the captain of the team urged Putin to change the national anthem. He told him that the present anthem, and the Parliament, eight years later, had still not come up with any words for it, resulted in a loss of soccer team morale and a dip in form. It was an astonishing thing to say at an awards ceremony. But it had its effect. Putin announced the current competition.

I apologize to any Russian readers of this newspaper. I know that there are probably revisionists in present day Russia who would like the anthem back for purely imperial reasons. But half the country?

Personally, I like a good rousing anthem and have long been dissatisfied with the Star Spangled Banner. The Star Spangled Banner sounds like it was composed by a cat who had his tail run over by a truck. Musically, and I love America, that's just the way it is. The Marseille is better. God Save the Queen is better. Even America the Beautiful is better. But if, in the end, the Russians decide that this inspirational old anthem of the Soviet Union has too many memories, I say we ought to grab it. We won the Cold War. They lost. To the victor go the spoils. And whether anybody likes it or not, this was the best of the best.

To hear the old Soviet National Anthem, go to the website www.me.unm.edu/~starr/anthem.html. But be prepared to hum it for weeks to come.

Russians are fully aware of the embarrassments that have dogged all attempts to secure a national anthem. Finding a song that would have an inspirational effect on a people from six time zones who speak a dozen different languages is no easy task. But a comedy program on a TV station in Moscow took a shot at it a few weeks ago. Announcing they had the results of "a poll," they read the following lyrics:

The Russian people spread out from Kamchatka to Kaliningrad.

So that even on Mars all those swine will know who will protect the Earth.

So that all children be healthy,
So that all women live better,
So that cows will give oil,
So that men can 'do it' until they die. ●

As we go to press; On Monday Vladmir Putin announced the old Soviet Anthem is to be restored, with new lyrics, as the anthem for the Russian Federation. It is to be ratified by the Russian Parliament before Friday. More on this development next week.

Dieter, Eckard, Rolf, Juergen And The Corporate Takeover That Went Sour

By Dan Rattiner

It is not often that I write about corporate takeovers, mergers and board room strategies. But there is a story developing at this moment that is the stuff movies are made of. Bottom line is that this would not be a bad time to buy a Dodge or Chrysler.

Chrysler Motors, as you know, is one of the three big American automakers. The others are General Motors and Ford. One might think that if a foreign company, say a German company, moved to take over one of the Big Three, it would be cause for national alarm. The Big Three are our birthright. On the other hand, Chrysler is the smallest of the Big Three and, to make an analogy, it sometimes has had to move as a poodle might in the middle of a pack of playful great danes. It has to know when to hide, when to grab a corner and hold onto it, rush in and then rush out.

And so it was, about a year and a half ago, that when Daimler, the big German auto maker that produces Mercedes Benz, started talks with Chrysler, most Wall Street analysts thought it might be a good thing. Both companies were about the same size. Both were known for quality, the German company in the luxury market, the Chrysler company in the middle class market. It could be a merger among equals.

The merger was completed in August of 1999, and Juergen Schrempp and James Holden, the Presidents respectively of Daimler and Chrysler, stood smiling in front of a big sign reading DaimlerChrysler, their arms around each other. That the balance of power between the two seemed to be tipped ever so slightly in favor of Daimler seemed a little odd. But then Schrempp was a more forceful businessman than Holden. He probably should be a little more equal than Holden.

From that point on, Juergen Schrempp, using his very slight advantage, seized total control of Chrysler.

The first two problems to confront the two executives were what language to conduct business in, and where the corporate headquarters ought to be. They chose English, which favored Chrysler. They chose Stuttgart which favored Daimler. Seems fair so far, yes?

From that point on, Juergen Schrempp, using his very slight advantage, seized total control of Chrysler. He didn't let on. For more than a year, the two men were to be seen smiling and waving. And during that year, Schrempp continued to praise Holden for the wonderful contribution he was making. Holden was indespensible. They couldn't do without him. In reality though, Schrempp was heading toward one of the biggest corporate disasters in history. It has not yet fully played out. But it will. And if we are not careful, the Big Three in Detroit may soon be just the Big Two. And that, all by itself, could throw America into a huge recession.

The problem is, frankly, Juergen Schrempp. Schrempp is empire building. In the recent past, before Chrysler, he took over Mitsubishi Motors and Smart Cars. With both these takeovers, he told the sitting chief executives that they would continue to exercise control as they had in the past. However, when Schrempp wanted it one way and the executives wanted it another way, there was a board meeting at which the chief executives marshalled their forces to have a big showdown. Before the meeting a reporter asked Schrempp what he thought of one of these chief executives.

"Who?" Schrempp replied with a grin. That was the last day that executive worked at Daimler.

Mistsubishi and Smart Cars, however, were subsidiaries of Daimler. So was a Canadian truckmaker called Western Star. And an American engine manufacturer known as Detroit Diesel. But Chrysler? Nobody knew it at the time, but after the "merger" with Chrysler, Schrempp thought of that company as just another subsidiary under the banner of the flagship, Mercedes Benz. This he had not informed his counterparts in Detroit.

Business continued along as usual for the balance of 1999. Chrysler turned a profit of $700 million on its $9 billion worth of business. And Chrysler, eager to share everything with Daimler, made the following proposals: they would build a small inexpensive four seater to enter the European Market. They wanted to put an engine with the Mercedes Benz name into a Chrysler car for distribution in America. And they wanted development money for a new minivan for distribution in America. Chrysler sells more minivans than any other auto manufacturer. In fact, they came up with the idea.

Schremp's response was no, no and no. The inexpensive car for Europe could compete with Mercedes Benz' "Smart Car," which was already out a year, but floundering. There would be no high class Mercedes Benz engine in a low-class Chrysler car because it would sully the Mercedes name. And major development monies would not be made available for the Minivan. In other words, Chrysler might as well have been an enemy. Or an upstart that didn't know its place in the Daimler firmament.

The result of this was that slowly, one by one, the American executives in Detroit handed in their resignations and went off to early retirement. Chrysler had gotten along, as I've said, because of its nimbleness. It had a strong Vice President for production. When times got bad he'd cut back for a month or two. He'd tighten up the inventory and parts delivery, close a few factories for awhile. (Chrysler, dollar for dollar, was a very profitable company. And they were on excellent terms with the workers. Even not working, the workers receive 95% of their salaries.) They'd get through it. Anyway, that Vice President quit.

No new development money? The proud Vice President of Engineering and Design took early retirement. And, one month before the release of the results of the second quarter of the year 2000 were to be announced, the Vice President in charge of Finance quit.

"Our Chrysler division will declare a profit," Schrempp declared just weeks before the announcement of the Second Quarter. The figures showed a staggering loss of $2 billion. DaimlerChrysler stock plummented. And James Holden took early retirement.

"These people had absolutely no plan for next year," Schrempp told the press after the figures came out. He was dispatching his four most trusted aides to deal with the situation, not only with Chrysler, but with Mitsubishi, the Smart Car division, and several other problem areas. These men were Andreas Renschler, Eckhard Cortes, Dieter Zetsche and Rolf Eckrodt.

Meanwhile, a weak second in command in the Chrysler marketing department replaced his chief, who was also taking early retirement. This new man did something incredible. He announced fire sale promotions — no down payment, no interest, no payments for a year — on brand new Chrysler cars just coming out. Let's move this inventory. Perhaps you have seen these commercials.

At this point, Jergen Schrempp held an interview with a German magazine in which he confessed that his negotiations about being a merger among equal with Chrysler was just a ploy. Chrysler wouldn't have accepted the"merger" if they had known what he had in mind.

Last week, Kirk Kerkorian, the Las Vegas businessman who owns one third of Chrysler's stock, filed an $8 billion lawsuit against the company. It had been taken over, he said, under dishonest and illegal circumstances.

So there the matter sits. Mighty Chrysler, a giant oceanliner employing 150,000 people, is moving along under full power without anybody in the wheelhouse and with a totally demoralized staff.

Personally, I think this is a very good time to buy a Chrysler made car. The price is right. And though in the medium run it is probably a good idea to inflict enough pain on Jergen Schrempp to get back this third of the Big Three, in the long run it is in everybody's interest to save Chrysler, avert a nationwide economic crash and hold on to all these jobs.

There's a moral here. Some people are just too smart for their own good. ●

A Trip To Orlando During The Election Crisis, Or, Why Not Just Get Goofy?

By Dan Rattiner

Cathie and I just came back from Orlando where we spent six days and five nights sampling what are referred to down there as "the Attractions." These include Disneyworld and Universal, which are so to speak the King and Crown Prince of Orlando respectively. But they also include a host of other fantasy things to see and do, including a Wet and Wild which is about the size of Rhode Island, Seaworld, Skull Kingdom, a Titanic attraction (the ship) and several other attractions where large buildings the size of the White House have been built either sinking into the ground on one side with the other side up in the air (Ripley"s Believe it or Not), or stood on the roof with the basement sticking up (Wonderworld).

You look at these big fat banks and you can easily imagine them filled with coins and bills. It makes you think of the vaults of Scrooge McDuck.

In a way, though Orlando is in Florida, it is a world of its own and though during our stay the Florida Supreme Court ordered a count of the ballots which would give the election to Gore and within twelve hours the United States Supreme Court stayed the hands of the Florida vote counters – which would give the election to Bush, we heard not a single person in Orlando, Florida, mention anything about this. What goes on in Tallahassee or Miami, Florida, is of little concern to Orlandans. What is more on their minds is whether or not Mickey Mouse has the flu.

Any way you look at it, however, five nights and six days is just too long to be in Orlando. At least for those not born into it. You start out skipping and yipping at the various waterfalls and dinosaurs and cartoon characters and by the end of the fourth day – which is where up until now I have always called a halt to the proceedings, you are "full." Or, as Cathie says, "all clapped out." There is, it turns out, a limit to the amount of continuous fun a person over the age of ten can endure. One could, I think, go four days, rest for two (golf, shop, hang around the pool etc.) then go four more days. But kids under ten won't let you work this rhythm. Like the energizer battery, they just keep going and going. Until they fall down and have to be carried. After which, they wake up re-energized -- pardon the pun – without having missed a beat.

Before I continue, I would like to note that there are at least four attractions here that have the imprint of some of our more well known Hamptonites on them. These include the E.T. Attraction at Universal which was hands-on designed by Steven Spielberg of East Hampton who also directed that movie. There is a Jaws attraction at Universal, a boatride where things go wrong and the voice of Roy Scheider of Bridgehampton, who stars in that movie as the Police Chief, is heard freeing you from trouble. And there is, at Disney, the Tower of Terror ride, which for the most part was designed by East Hampton special effects genius Bran Ferren (East Hampton High School class of '78.) Finally, after a long day at Universal's Island Adventure, you can relax at the Universal CityWALK where one of the prime attractions is Jimmy Buffet's Margaritaville Cafe. While the Hamptons was suffering through the first snowstorm of the winter, Cathie and I were sitting in wooden outdoor lounge chairs, taking up the sun, enjoying the 85 degree weather and listening to Jimmy Buffet of North Haven sing his hits over the loud speaker in front of Margaritaville, drinking, well, you know.

From a City planning perspective, Orlando and its attractions are a truly amazing achievement. Just 25 years ago, Orlando was an agricultural town where the farmers brought their produce for shipping out all over the country. Population was 30,000 and the biggest buildings in town were the farmer's market and the Catholic Church. Today there are half a dozen skyscrapers in the City, each owned by a bank, each about 25 stories high and a city block thick. Population is closing in on one million five, easily making it the fastest growing city in America – all based on entertainment. The city now has 110,000 hotel rooms. If this continues, Orlando will someday be the the world's Emerald City and the biggest city on the planet.

Huge amounts of cash are coming into Orlando every day from visitors from all over the world. You drive by downtown on the elevated superhighways and you look at these big fat banks and you can easily imagine them filled with coins and bills. It makes you think, well, anyway, it makes me think of the money vaults of Scrooge McDuck.

I love this town (as Bill Murray says at the end of Ghostbusters.) I love these attractions. And I have seen them over and over again since my daughter, who is now 29, was one year old. I have pictures of her being pushed around the Magic Kingdom in a stroller. So I have been here A LOT. In fact, I was here the first year the place was opened. And then the second and third and so forth. I'm not a fanatic about it, but as I look back I guess I have been here twenty-two times in twenty-seven years. So I've seen the place grow.

I can also tell you that kids, my kids anyway, who came here over and over and over, loved Disneyworld and the other attractions from the time they were two until they were about fifteen. Then it was Let's Go Somewhere Else, Dad. Well, Dad still wanted to go to Disneyworld etc. Ha ha.

We had an absolutely skipping and jumping time for the first four days as I've said. During this time we attended a joust at Medieval Times where we were fed dinner in the jousting arena without benefit of dining utensils. We went to MGM Studios at Disney and rode the new Rock'n'Roller Coaster starring Aerosmith (zero to sixty in 2.3 seconds). We also enjoyed Star Tours, the Great Movie Ride with all the explosions and of course the Tower of Terror. We saw Cyberworld in 3D at an IMAX Theatre, had dinner at the House of Blues in Downtown Disney, saw the Laserlight Fireworks at Epcot, walked 1.5 miles around the World Showcase Lagoons visiting the permanent displays

How Kids Think

21 Six Year Olds At The Manorville School Discuss Christmas

By Janet Berg

After traveling on long and winding roads through Manorville, passing thick wooded areas, the Long Island Game Farm and a corral full of horses, I found magic in the icy December air at the South Manor Elementary School.

I was especially fortunate to share the enchantment of 21 six-year-olds while wearing two different hats, one as their substitute teacher, and one as a writer for Dan's Papers.

> "The other Christmas, Santa went to our bathroom and when he flushed, he woke me and my brother up."

Although some children have teeny-weeny voices, Michelle Macedonio's delightful class of first graders are not that shy about sharing their views on the holidays.

When I asked them to describe Santa Claus, this is how they responded: "Well," Sean Doyle said, "he has a red jacket with a red hat with a... umm...

"You mean with a white circle on top of it," someone tried to help.

"Yeah, and its, its magic," another said in a mystical tone. "And he has toys in a big sack. And he goes down the chimney."

Then a little girl, named Cassandra, who likes to be called "Cassie" added, "he has to get fat before Christmas, 'cause Jessica, his wife, tries to make him get fat. And then after he comes out of the chimney, he gets skinny. I think he goes on a diet."

A little boy named Frankie (I don't know which one, as there are two Frankies in the class) adds to the description: "He has a white beard 'cause he's old. He's 51." "And he's very jolly because it's a jolly Christmas," said Rebecca.

Cassie added, "and because he gives presents and that makes him happy."

One of the very active boys: "His cheeks are rosy red 'cause Rudolph the red nose reindeer puts his nose on his cheeks — I can tell you that."

Looking out the window with big, blue expressive eyes, Brooke Arthur sighs, "cause it's TOO cold out."

Shannon: "And his nose is cherry red too 'cause of the breeze when he flies in his sleigh."

I asked the children if Santa had any other clothes aside from his red suit. The whimsical Cassie answered without hesitation, "Oh, I know, 'cause I saw the real Santa Claus at the end of the Macy's parade and I saw him get new clothes on and they looked like all sorts of different colors, like green and white and pink and like blue," she laughed. "I just stared at him," she giggled.

"Santa laughs, "Ho Ho Ho when he's happy," Shannon said.

I asked, "Aside from things you want, like toys, what are some of the things you need from Santa?" (This concept did not come easy.)

Rebecca: "I want a dolly."

No,"I repeated, "aside from toys.

Sean: "Umm, clothes?" he said, pretty sure he was right, even though he didn't seem to want or need them for himself.

Holly Governale: "An ornament?"

"He can send me a letter," someone shouted.

"Oooh, I need a real puppy," someone cried. When I told them I recently got a new puppy, a little boy raised his voice in utter disbelief, "Noooo, you're faking."

Cassie, as usual, had the perfect answer, "I know what I need."

"What?" I asked curiously.

"Wrapping paper," she answered, sensibly enough.

The beautiful faces of the children, with names like Kaitlynn, Billy, Kevin, Malik, Thomas and Anina made the whole room glow. And they glowed bright when we talked about Chanukah. "I don't know if I celebrate Chanukah" one little girl said, as if I knew the answer.

Someone else said, "you get eight wishes." Then, in a chain reaction, many children wished for their own animals: In amplified voices they called out their wishes: "I wish I had lots of kittens." "I wish I had 100 baby rabbits." "I wish I had 102 Dalmatians."

Rebecca said, "I wish I had 5 fishies." A little boy: "I have... I have 5 fishies. Jessica: "I wish I had 8 puppies."

"A wish for every candle... yeah," hollered a tiny girl.

Then, one of the two Frankies, who still had his new spelling words (with the 'ugh' sound) fresh in his mind, said very seriously, "I wish I had a slug."

"Let's talk about the meaning of some Christmas songs," I said. "What is a partridge in a pear tree?" I probed.

Cassie: "A big fat bird in a pantry."

Holly: "A big fat bird in a tree."

"What about four calling birds?" I inquired.

Sean: "Calling birds sit on a branch and talk to each other."

Thomas said, "Noel is a girl."

"And Mistletoe?" I quizzed.

"You kiss someone under it," a little girl shouted with glee. A little boy yelled, "eeeeewwwww."

Jessica: "You know what? My friend loves my brother, he's in 4th grade, she has mistletoe, she was running after him, trying to kiss him, and she's in 2nd grade."

Felicia: "Mistletoe is some kind of a bridge."

Then stories of past Christmases were shared, while visions of sugarplums danced in their heads.

Rebecca: "Last Christmas I got nothing on my list, except one thing, and it was Oh my God, it was Molly, a doll."

Shannon: "This Christmas I'm going to California. And it's my birthday too."

Frankie: "The other Christmas, Santa went to our bathroom and when he flushed, he woke me and my brother up. My brother wants the dog, 'Techno,' an electronic puppy."

Brooke whispered, "I lost my list. But, I got a Barbie house, anyway."

Six year old Kody said, "Last Christmas I got a toy doll and I lost it and found it seven years later."

"Kody, you play with dolls?" a boy questioned in a make-believe tough voice.

"It was a boy doll," he protested.

Stephanie, wearing a very pretty dress said, "I wanted the 'Easy Bake Oven,' but, Santa didn't get me it, but my Aunt Donna got me it."

Cassie: "Once, on my first Christmas, when I was five, I mean when I was three, I was shy to talk to Santa Claus, but I didn't tell Santa what I wanted so I didn't get anything. Then the next Christmas, I still didn't tell him what I wanted, 'cause I was also shy, but he gave me a bike."

Believe it or not, in between all the questions asked about the holidays, these charming little children got a lot of work done. We also read storybooks and made gingerbread men that came alive and tapped them awake while they napped.

Felicia: "On Christmas, my baby brother, he's one, was looking at the tree like this (she demonstrates), and it was soooo cute."

A quiet little girl said, "We celebrate Chanukah with a candle on top of a tree."

Kids were stirring and talking about snow, and all of a sudden, some children started singing in very loud voices: "Oh, he knows when your are sleeping. He knows when you're awake... He knows if you've been bad or good, so..."

With eyes popping out of my head, I had to quiet them down and remind them, "Remember the rules." But, secretly, I wished they could sing their little hearts out! ●

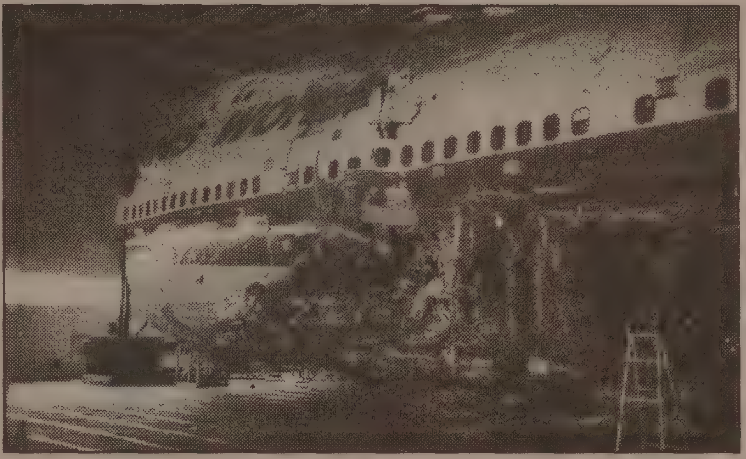
A Meeting With The CIA

At CIA-NTSB Meeting On Flight 800, Investigators Talk Of A Missile

By Jerry Cimisi



On April 30, 1999, a year and half after the Federal Bureau of Investigation announced (in November, 1997) it could determine no criminal cause for the explosion of TWA Flight 800, officials from the National Transportation Safety Board and representatives and met with the CIA and discussed this very possibility. More precisely, if Flight 800 had been downed by a missile.

A transcript of this meeting, newly make public by the NTSB, shows that even at that date, nearly three years after the July, 1996 explosion of the plane, the investigation undertaken by the government could not clear away certain questions.

The meeting opened at 10 a.m. that morning with a friendly give and take between NTSB officials who are named, and CIA officals, who are not. After a brief opening by David Mayer, who heads the NTSB eyewitness group, the unnamed Deputy Director of the Office of Transnational Issues (DDOTI) speaks. He introduces two CIA analysts (who had worked with the FBI on the Flight 800 investigation) and a representative of the CIA's office of general counsel. "Like all of you in private industry know, we don't go anywhere without our lawyer," he said.

DDOTI briefly goes into the reason for CIA involement with 800; because the explosion of the plane was originally suspected to be the work of terrorism and that is certainly the CIA's purview, the Agency was involved from the very first day of the investigation.

Though, in an epiphany-like moment (that will be related further on), one of the CIA analysts, on December 30, 1996 was abruptly certain a missile had not been involved in bringing down Flight 800.

Supplied with 244 (out 755) eyewitness reports, radar data and debris field information, the CIA spent "more than 2000 man hours of work" on the FBI eyewitness reports alone.

The CIA's conclusions, with which the FBI and the NTSB have publicly concurred, is that eyewitnesses who saw a missile-like streak of light ascend and then become a fireball, were seeing the already exploded body of Flight 800 ascend after the nose fell off.

CIA Analyst 1 said the Agency has calculated that it was appoximately 49 seconds from the first explosion on the plane to when it hit the water, so that if eyewitnesses described their viewing time of the incident as ten or fifteen seconds, they could only be witnessing the plane well after it had initially exploded.

In the course of the briefing the CIA analyst admits the CIA did not talk to any of the eyewitnesses, though apparently the agency did go to certain locations, where eyewitnesses had reported the incident, in order to better "see" the event from their perspective.

The analyst also added the CIA did not get the 244 eyewitness reports all at once, but over a period of about ten months. "We started out early on with probably about thirty to forty reports."

If sound travels a fifth of a mile a second (a mile every five seconds), and Flight 800 exploded about ten miles off shore, a witness on the beach would not hear a first explosion for 50-60 seconds, depending on the eyewitness's distance. This fits the CIA scenario.

...if the 100,000 pounds or so of the nose had suddenly come off, how could the plane remain stable enough to rise?

But Dennis Rodrigues, a Boeing Safety Accident Investigator said that "The problem I'm having ... is the center tank explosion is categorized as a low-order explosion." This raised the possibility that the loud sound some witnesses heard occurred before the center wing fuel tank explosion, which would weaken the CIA's time anaylsis.

Some eyewitnesses heard a very loud explosion; others heard a loud explosion and one to three lesser explosions; others heard none at all.

The CIA analysts pointed out two very simple things that affect the hearing of sounds. Witnesses east of the plane were more likely to hear an explosion than witnesses an equal distance away to the west: the obvious answer was that wind affected the propagation of sound. As does simple background noise, such as an eyewitnes's proxmity to breaking waves.

Robert Young, Director of Flight Safety for TWA, questioned the CIA conclusion that the plane rose after it exploded. This is the foundation of the CIA's analysis that it was no missile eyewitnesses saw but the exploded plane itself ascending.

An Eastwind airline pilot flying at 16,000 feet witnessed the explosion of Flight 800, which was at about 13,800 feet. Young related that this pilot, "closing at a rather rapid rate," would have been very concerned "at about 400,000 pounds of airplane and whatever zooming up to about a thousand feet above his altitude."

The CIA contends Flight 800 ascended about 3,000 feet after it first exploded.

The CIA's response to Young's query is that although the Eastwind pilot was above Flight 800, he was such a distance away ("...his estimate was 15 to 20 miles away") that he could not properly judge the degree of the plane's ascent.

"It's a very important point that it's not critical precisely how high the plane went," continued CIA Analyst 1, who then curiously suggests it was the news media who put forth the idea that "the plane exploded and zoomed up and this is what the eyewitnesses saw."

More curiously, the analyst adds, "Even if that plane went up several thousand feet, on the ground there's maybe one eyewitness who saw that, this guy on the bridge."

Here one must add that obviously more than "one" eyewitnesses saw a light streak upward. First the CIA is saying all the eyewitnesses who saw this missile-like streak weren't seeing a missile after all, then it is saying only one individual saw this in the first place. Which is not the case.

Jim Walters, of the Air Line Pilots Association, said there were 260 eyewitnesses who saw a streak of light ascend into the sky.

The eyewitness who was "this guy on the bridge" was discussed at length in a recent article (Dec. 1 issue). Eyewitness 571, Mike Wire, working on Beach Lane Bridge in Westhampton, had the distinction of having the CIA use his reference points for their video. But the CIA apparently altered his perspective to fit their explanations. They never interviewed Wire. (His testimony is on the NTSB website, www.ntsb.gov, Witness 571 in the Eyewitness Docket. The CIA transcript is also there.)

Bob Young of TWA raises another point. For the plane to rise the engines must be receiving "What we call postiive pressure... with the nose off there would be no power to the electrical boast pumps to provide that postive pressure to the engines."

Without going into detail, the CIA analyst said, "I asked our aerodynamicist... to do a simulation... aerodynamically the plane can ascend without power according to our aerodynamic model."

Young then questions that if the 100,000 pounds or so of the nose had suddenly come off, how could the plane remain stable enough to rise? The Eastwind pilot, as well as other eyewitnesses, saw the plane turn to one side. The CIA analyst responded that the pilot was too far to see parts of the plane.

Eyewitness 571 said the light he first saw rising from behind a house was zigzagging slightly. Rodrigues said, "[If] the airplane is in crippled flight, I have a problem understanding how it would zigzag."

CIA Analyst 1: "He said the light is zigzagging or twinkling. I'm not convinced that that necessarily reflects precisely what the plane is doing or why the light appears to look that way to him."

Walters: "Did anyone try to explain what the light might be that the airplane is emitting after the nose comes off?"

The analyst replied that residual fuel in the center wing fuel tank was "dispersed into the air, and it's burning. That could be the source of the light."

Walters said that, usually, fuel air mixture doesn't burn in that manner.

The CIA analyst said the agency did not address that specific question. Rodrigues went on to say that if, at that point, the fuel tank had exploded and the plane is climbing, the residual fuel in the tank, about 50 gallons is pushed to the back part of the tank. "So if this fuel is burning it's burning in the tank in a way that would keep it from being visible, I think. So what's actually burning is the question that kind of comes up."

At this point the NTSB's Dan Campbell says, "If you don't mind, I'm going to ask CIA Analyst #1 not to answer that question."

Bernard Loeb of the NTSB says to Rodrigues, "I think there is an explanation, but we will obviously have to deal with that, and we'll do so, Dennis. But it's not something they have done."

But later on in the meeting Rodrigues comes around that question again. Referring to the eyewitnesses, he says, "I mean, what are they physically seeing ascending?"

The CIA analyst says, "It's not important what our opinnion would be on that.... It's not important in terms of interpreting whether or not a missile was involved. It's fire. It's probably burning fuel."

Rodrigues: "That's what we are trying to do. Setting a missile aside."

Loeb once more interjects: "I think you're asking them something they haven't done, they haven't...worked on. I think CIA Analyst 1 was very clear about that earlier. And so I think that's left for us – in the end, that's going to be something the Board has to grapple with... in it's own analysis."

In regards to "setting a missile aside," near the end of the meeting the CIA analyst said, "The conclusion that the eyewitnesses were only seeing the burning aircraft was made at 10 p.m. at the night of the 30th of December 1996."

Walters: "Was it really?"

The analyst relates, "Yes, I was sitting behind the computer," and adds that the agency was trying, from the eyewitnesses reports, to locate the source of a missile, Then: "There was the realization, having all the data laid out, that you can explain what the eyewitnesses are seeing with only the burning aircraft."

With the fifth anniversary of the Flight 800 tragedy coming up next summer, official findings may never erase the doubts that many private investigators have over what really happened to TWA Flight 800. It is certain that the many eyewitnesses who saw something that night in July will not easily be dissuaded from their original perceptions. ●

THE BEST HOLIDAY STORE WINDOWS IN THE HAMPTONS

By Pamela Gibson

I am sure that there are more creative and artistic people per square mile on the East End of Long Island than anywhere else on this planet. With this thought in mind, I looked forward to finding the best holiday decorated windows in the Hamptons. Hoping for not only beauty but a variety of themes evoking a feeling of warm inner holiday spirit and a "why didn't I think of that" recognition of creative genius at work, I quickly realized that I would have to find these windows at night so that I could not only fully appreciate the lighting, but also photograph them without the glare and reflection of holiday shopping traffic. What a treat awaited me!

I quickly found, in Bridgehampton, John Salibello Antiques, located on the south side of the main road, a few houses away from Dan's Papers. Absolutely stunning, the entire house is a beacon of holiday cheer, but the enormous Antique Cookie Jar Tree, in one of the two front windows, is outstanding. Evoking one of those "why didn't I think of that" moments, previously hoped for, it is so detailed that you should dress warmly because you will want to spend more than a moment enjoying the details of each delightful jar. The window opposite is aglow with sparkling antique chandeliers making the entire experience of viewing these windows, at night, even more exciting.

Moving east, there is nothing like a window that reminds you of an old-fashioned childhood holiday and the Rum Runner Kids window in the village of East Hampton is a masterful execution of this warm inner memory, reminding us all that this is a special time of year for children. I wanted to slide into that chair by the fire and begin with Winnie-the-Pooh and continue through to Now We Are Six. In it's simplicity this window can draw a pure memory of holidays past and you can't help but feel a Peter Pan glow wishing to reread all the old childhood adventures that are such treasured memories. It was nice to see a window that was not just chock-a-block with all the wares for sale, no stacks of cashmere sweaters here, just a simple thought well executed.

Around the corner, in the heart of East Hampton Village, is a beautiful window full of sparking lights creatively laced through curly willow branches and stunning silver serving pieces. The Monogram Shop is a terrific place to shop for that hard-to-find-a-gift-for friend, particularly if that friend is an anglophile. Both windows are exquisitely executed by a gifted designer and decorator. I felt as if I had just strolled by a lovely shop in London. I am sure that snow had begun to fall and I had that warm all over feeling that you can only get when alone on a cold evening bundled well against the weather, enjoying a truly beautiful site. Once again, these windows were not stuffed with all the wears of the shop, as someone less creative might have done, but follow a simple and detailed plan, elegant and stylish. Incidentally, this shop contains a treasure trove, each item a discovery, and well worth a visit earlier in the evening.

Moving on to Sag Harbor, I was stunned by the windows at The Romany Kramoris Gallery. What an effort! Someone had spent a considerable amount of time and talent to create a true walk-by experience. I was mesmerized for quite some time, just enjoying the details of this wonderland, and so glad to be viewing and photographing at night because the lights in these windows so beautifully and creatively display the holiday spirit. This Gallery/Shop is a great place to look for stocking stuffers, with everything from antiques to folkart items, and world arts and crafts. You can't get out of this shop without buying something, so check out this window in the early evening, then stroll in it, and expect to spent an hour exploring every nook and cranny in this wonderful shop. It is a Renaissance Experience, so much talent is every inch of shelf space.

I recommend that you take an evening walk through each village and enjoy the creative genius of our merchants. It will warm your soul and renew your holiday spirit. •

The Riviera? Oh boy, that's a story in itself!

Bridgehampton's Peter Maas' article "The Accidental Warlord," which appeared in this month's Talk magazine, is a riveting account of Hussein Aideed's rise to power as a leader of one of Somalia's most feared militia fractions. Hmmm, very interesting.

Dan's Papers
BEST of the BEST 2000
Norsic has been selected as the Official Dan's Papers Reader's Choice Best Garbage Hauler!

Here on the East End, just about everyone reads Dan's Papers. That's why we're so proud that we came in at the top of our category in their Best of the Best readers' poll for the year 2000. So, to all of you who voted for us this time around, we would like to express our heartfelt thanks. To those of you who didn't...well, we'll try harder in 2001. Hey! If there's one thing we all learned this year, it's that every vote counts.

The Sheltered Islander

By Sally Flynn

OBSERVATIONS OF A NEW ISLANDER # 136

CUT THE CARDS

Well, here we go again... Christmas cards. All over Shelter Island, couples are having the same discussion right now.

Bill: "How can we need a hundred dollars in stamps? We don't know a hundred dollars worth of people."

Mary: "Yes we do. Friends, family, alumni, business associates."

Bill: "Friends, lets see, we got the Clarks, the Gibbs, the Kings, maybe a couple more."

Mary: "I have 82 listed in the friends column."

Bill: "We don't have 82 friends."

Mary: "Look, it's not just friends we see now. There's old friends from different places we've lived..."

Bill: "Why are we sending them Christmas cards?"

Mary: "To keep in touch. Remember last year when Suzie sent that nice picture of her kids making a snowman?"

Bill: "The one on the refrigerator?"

Mary: "Yes, we got to see how big her kids are getting."

Bill: "I thought those were our kids!"

Mary: "How could think they were ours?"

Bill: "Two kids in snowsuits making a snowman...we got two kids, we got snowsuits, we got snow Mary.....I let Mom take it with her before she went to Florida. She bought a frame for it."

Mary: "Your mother has a framed picture of someone else's kids.... great. You better tell her about your astute powers of observation."

Bill: "No, I think we'll just let that one go..."

Mary: "Besides old friends, I have friends from college ..."

Bill: "They don't need a card. When was the last time you saw any of those people?"

Mary: "That's not the point. We keep in touch. I want to know how everybody's doing."

Bill: "What's the point of a once a year card. These people aren't in your life anymore. Waste of a stamp."

Mary: "Don't you wonder about any of your college friends?"

Bill: "Just Jerry. But that's because he bought Dad's business and I still talk to him."

Mary: "You don't stay in touch with anyone from college?"

Bill: "Mary I was there to drink and chase girls. That I got a degree was incidental. I had a good time with my college buddies when I was there and that's where it ends. I'm not interested in who's selling used cars now and who is a CEO somewhere. Real men don't send cards to other real men."

Mary: "Oh pardon me "Mr. I am a Rock" - on an Island... How about high school friends?"

Bill: "You can't be serious. You send cards to high school friends?"

Mary: "You don't?"

Bill: "Heck no, they're all here."

Mary: "Well I didn't go to school here, so I send to my chums."

Bill: "What's the 'x' next to these names mean?"

Mary: "Exchange, we successfully exchanged cards last year."

Bill: "What's the 'i -scdr' mean?"

Mary: "Incomplete - sent card, didn't receive."

Bill: "NNA?"

Mary: "Needs New Address. It means the card I sent last year came back."

Bill: "Ah ha! So you're a 'i-scdr' on their list..."

Mary: "Noooo... because if they send me a card and I received it, I'd have their address and they'd be an 'x' not an 'NNA'."

Bill: "What's 'osh' mean?

Mary: "On second husband."

Bill: "What's 'bh'? Bastard husband?"

Mary: "Between husbands.

Bill: "What kind of science is this?"

Mary: "Hallmarkology, when you care enough to try your very best."

Bill: "This is the biggest waste of time, money and effort..."

Mary: "Don't you have a deer to hit somewhere? Maybe you can make it to IGA before it closes. We need milk."

Bill: "Yeah, that's right, just send me on errands. Get milk, get a hundred dollars worth of stamps, sheesh, I'm just the errand boy..."

Mary: "Don't be silly, you're MY errand boy. Besides, I have another job for later tonight..."

Bill: "Is a hundred dollars worth of stamps gonna be enough?" ●

Rumor has it that Starbucks is looking for a location in Sag Harbor, our quaint, quiet little village that everyone is talking about. Starbucks is looking for a deal taking over some stores near the Long Wharf at the bottom of the Sag Harbor bridge. Could it be that the Golden Pear and Starbucks will be neighbors in Sag Harbor too?

elaine k.g. benson, her daughter's column

This is clearly the beginning of the holiday season. People call and as part of the conversation remember to include good wishes for the holidays. The streets are decorated. Many houses and yards are highly adorned and the stores are full. Although there are always a few Bah Humbug types in the crowd most people are cheerful and warmed by the holiday spirit.

Last Thursday, The Group for the South Fork had their holiday party. Held at the Parrish Hall near Southampton Hospital, it was the first party of my holiday season. On Saturday there was an open house, holiday party at the Bridgehampton Child Care and Rec. Center. The kids sang for us and four of the girls, from the girl's club, presented a poem that warmed my heart. They have so much pride in who they are. There are times when pride can get in our way but to see the girls' pride in themselves and each other was an inspiration.

Someone came up to me at the Center party and mentioned that they are headed off to Santa Fe. I mentioned that I'd just returned. He and his wife started laughing at me. They had read my column last week. They were responding to it and me as if I had already told them of the trip to Santa Fe and, in fact, I had told them through this column. People often respond to the columns as if we were continuing a personal conversation. It is somewhat personal. It's almost a conversation and I think it's fun that people read the column and have a response.

Christmas cards are beginning to pile up in my mailbox and I'm aware that I've made no move to send any this year. My husband and I used to send a Christmas letter every two years. It allowed us to stay in touch with friends in far off places. Last year, I sent a photo card to friends. Between my business list and my list of friends, the idea of sending out cards is a little overwhelming. I need a good program in my computer to put together a mailing list, especially for my personal address book. What a joy it would be to push a button and have mailing labels pop out! This, too, will come in time.

I've admitted that I'm falling down on the job of sending out cards. It reminds me that the gifts I have for friends and family, who live out of town, have yet to be wrapped, packed, and sent. It is time. The Post Office gets to be a nightmare this time of year. Bridgehampton has a great Post Office. I run into almost everyone I know at the Bridgehampton P. O. Even though it can be a nightmare, it's especially fun to go to the Post Office this time of year.

At Dan's Papers, we each picked a name out of a cup to determine who we will buy a present for. The gift must cost under ten dollars. I've thought about buying ten dollars worth of supplies and making a gift. Ten dollars worth of ingredients makes a lot of rum balls for instance. Ten dollars worth of art supplies can go far. Ten dollars spent at the thrift shop may produce a great gift. Even at K-Mart, ten dollars will buy a pillow, dish towels, candy, silver earrings (on sale), gloves, socks, etc. It sounds harder than it is. One of the best gifts I ever got was a puppy. The puppy was free. I don't think the recipient of my gift at Dan's will appreciate a new puppy. It does fit in with the criteria that were set up for the exchange however. Dan appreciates dogs. I didn't pick Dan's name. Back to the drawing board!

A girlfriend came by on Saturday to show me a great gift possibility. She is the proud companion to a dog that came from ARF. The dog has come up with a new fashion line of bandanas for dogs. There are special prints for holiday. There's a Spring line in the works. Some have sequins and some have fringe. There are different sizes available. There are endless possibilities. I hope the dog or her human friend has a head for business. This is a new business that I'd like to see survive and develop. The bandanas are available in Southampton and will soon be in lots of stores in our area. A portion of every sale will go to animal oriented charities. I think it's great that Sally, a dog, who was helped by the people at ARF wants to give something back to ARF. I'm impressed.

I encourage all of you to wrap up all the gifts you've bought so far and put them out somewhere in your house to encourage the feeling that the holidays are upon us. The snow helped but there's nothing like a pile of gifts to bring home the fact that this is a time for giving. Give of yourself and as I said last week, spread a little love around. It makes the world a better place.

sad.

"What are we going to do?" Blitzen said. "We could be out of a job."

Even some of the elves were slowing down in making the toys. But still, the lead elf promised they'd have everything ready on time. "If our toys are still needed," he said glumly.

"Then Mrs. Claus came into the workshop," Malcolm wrote, typing with just one finger of one hand. "'Who wants some hot apple pie?' she asked. All the elves ran over. Break time, they shouted."

Down in the City of Banff, everyone at Zappy Man Headquarters went into a secret meeting closed to the public. An hour later, they emerged. Happy Zappy Man got up on a soapbox.

"Canada is going to have Christmas a month early," Happy said. "In three days, I am going to show the world what it will be like if they elect Happy Zappy Man to deliver the presents. I'll do it here in Canada first. We can't lose."

And so it was that on November 29, early in the morning, all the children came downstairs to find carefully wrapped presents in front of their Christmas trees. They opened them up.

"What's this?" one little boy asked. He held up a Double A Battery. "Here's a note. It reads I OWE YOU A BEEPER"

A little girl opened up a pink package and took out a power cord. "I got a note too," she said. "It reads I OWE YOU A GAMEBOY. What good is that?"

Angry crowds of parents and children surrounded Happy Zappy Man's Headquarters in Banff. One of his aides came up to a microphone outside to announce that Happy Zappy Man was not coming out. He was exhausted.

"He spent the whole night making deliveries," the aide said.

But the crowd wouldn't leave. And finally Happy Zappy Man came out. One of his boots was ripped. His cape was on sideways.

"Everybody got SOMETHING, didn't they?" There was silence. "I mean my computer said everybody had been a little good and a little bad so everybody got a little bit of SOMETHING." There was more silence. "Okay, okay, it is expensive running this campaign. You think this was easy? So there wasn't very much left for presents. Anybody want to make a donation? Okay, I sold most of the presents to pay for the campaign."

A group of Banff policemen rushed forward and placed Happy Zappy Man under arrest. They carried him off in handcuffs.

"Don't forget to vote!" he shouted as they stuffed him in the back of a police van.

And so, two nights later, on December 1, they held the election. It was three weeks before Christmas.

"We have sixteen electoral votes from Poland for Santa Claus," an announcer said, watching the color of Poland turn from yellow to red. "We have twenty-three electoral votes from Brazil for Santa Claus. And we have fifty-one electoral votes from America for Santa Claus. And here is the report coming in that will put Santa Claus over the top. Eleven electoral votes from Canada for Santa Claus. Happy Zappy Man has lost his home country and he has lost the election. It is a landslide for Santa Claus."

The next morning, there was no immediate word from Santa Claus. Had he heard? Would there be a Christmas? A rescue party, landing by ski plane south of the North Pole on the ice north of Greenland, was able to locate a stranded Malcolm P. Sulzberger III, who had gotten his sled dogs to pee the word HELP in the snow to guide the ski plane in.

"Santa is jubilant!" Sulzberger told the reporter from CNN who had accompanied the rescue team. "He and the elves and the reindeer are jumping up and down. And as I was leaving, he was giving Mrs. Claus a big, wet kiss. Christmas will be held as usual. And he will go on for the next two hundred years."

"Has he gained any weight?" the CNN reporter asked.

"Nope," Sulzberger said. "He's no fatter than usual."

And as you know, Christmas went off as usual. And Malcolm P. Sulzberger, his arm in a sling and arriving in a wheelchair, was awarded a special Pulitzer Prize at a big dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria. And Santa Claus made an appearance. Merry Christmas to all, he said. ● set up there by Japan, Morocco, Italy, Germany, China, Japan, Norway and so forth and so on. We went to Universal Studios and rode the Earthquake Ride, King Kong, Terminator 2 (another 3D ride) and Twister. We went to a 24plex movie theatre (you read that right) at Pleasure Island and saw Dungeons and Dragons – two thumbs up – and at Universal's Island of Adventure we went over Ripsaw Falls in a log, took a raft ride through the Jurassic Park River and took another 3D adventure called the Amazing Adventure of Spiderman. We also attended a wonderful 85th birthday dinner party for a millionaire that turned into a murder we had to solve at the Sleuth's Mystery Theatre.

I found two new things quite funny in the rules and regulations of these rides. You know how at some amusement parks they say if you are under a certain height you can't go on a particular ride? At Universal's Island Adventure, they have one ride, the Flying Unicorn, for which you must be 36" high, the Amazing Adventures of Spiderman for which you must be 40", Jurassic Park River Adventure 42", Dudley Do- Right's Ripsaw Falls 44", Popeye and Bluto's Bilge-Rat Barges 48", Doctor Doom's Fearfall 52" and Dueling Dragons and Incredible Hulk RollerCoaster 54". In other words, a kid can come here one year and then CONCENTRATE ON GROWING to be able to go on a certain ride the following year!

But that's not all. As if this weren't enough of an indignity to parents, there is a ride, Pteranodon Flyers, which is a flying dinosaur flapping over the park, that you can only ride if you are BETWEEN 36" and 56". And if you are taller than 56" you can only go on it if accompanied by someone of that size! Ha!

The other little detail I also found hilarious, also at Universal Studios, is something called CHILD SWAP. There are six locations around the park which are called CHILD SWAP. For awhile, I thought this was some kind of joke thing. But then I read the fine print.

"Child Swap: (Locations) where one member of a party may watch over a child while the rest of the party rides, then swap places so that they may enjoy the ride as well."

We didn't talk much going back out to the airport on the last day. Cathie, my significant other, finally spoke. She was apparently thinking of all these people in t-shirts, shorts and sneakers, which I might add, is exactly what I was wearing when she spoke.

"There is a serious fashion crisis here," she said.

Well, next month is January and we go away on vacation again. This time to Paris, Venice and Prague. Cathie can get her fashion head back on straight when we visit Barbaralee Diamonstein and Carl Spielvogel in Bratislav, where Carl is serving as American Ambassador to Slovakia. It's a whole different kind of vacation. We just won't tell anybody where we were in December. •

THE 16TH ANNUAL GUILD HALL AWARDS

By Joan Zandell

This past Tuesday evening at the Plaza Hotel four distinguished artists were chosen by the Guild Hall Academy of the Arts for the year 2000. This year's honorees were Lanford Wilson for the Literary Arts, Ross Bleckner for the Visual Arts, Cy Coleman for the Performing Arts and Jason Epstein for Arts and Letters. The thoroughly entertaining, resplendently brilliant and witty Peter Stone was the master of ceremonies.

Lanford Wilson is a pioneer of the Off-Broadway Stage and regional theatre, his plays known for their experimental staging, simultaneous dialogue and deferred character exposition. In 1980, he won the Pulitzer Prize for Tally's Folly.

Beginning in 1963, Lanford Wilson formed lasting relationships with such Off-Off Broadway Theatre Companies as the La Mama Experimental Theatre Company in downtown New York City and Cafe Cino. By 1969, he founded the Circle Theatre Company, years later to be known as Circle Rep, also in New York City.

1971 saw the production of The Great Nebula in Orion, followed in 1973 by The Hot L Baltimore, and in 1975 The Mound Builders: all were received with great acclaim.

Ross Blechner, the honoree for the Visual Arts, came to critical attention in 1975 when several of his paintings appeared in the Biennial Exhibition at the Whitney Museum of American Art. Working in a variety of styles, he attempts to evoke a visceral response from the viewer. His work reveals an increased social awareness, returning to previous periods in art history such as figurative work and combining it with his own personal content. Ross Blechner believes that art functions as an agent of change.

Cy Coleman, who according to Clive Barnes of the New York Post is "a permanent gem in Broadway's musical crown", is the composer of such standards as "Witchcraft" and "The Best Is Yet To Come." His first Broadway musical score was Wildcat which featured the wildly popular song "Hey Look Me Over." In 1962, Little Me was produced, which won Cy Coleman the first of twelve Tony nominations. (Last year's revival starred Martin Short winning the Tony.)

His next hit was Sweet Charity starring Gwen Verdon, which won four Tony Awards. In the 1970s, Coleman composed Seesaw which won two Tony's, I Love My Wife, the recipient of two Tony Awards and a Drama Desk Award, and On the Twentieth Century, which won five Tony Awards and a Drama Desk Award for Best Musical.

In 1980 Cy Coleman made his producing debut with Barnum, for which he also wrote the score, winning three Tony's. In 1990 City of Angels won six Tony's and in 1991 The Will Roger's Follies won six Tony Awards. The 1997/98 season saw the multi-award winning musical, The Life, which Coleman co-wrote and produced. The revival of Little Me was followed by Somebody Exactly Like You and was produced Off-Broadway. His new show premiers next season and is called The Great Ostrovsky, starring Alan King.

A special award went to Jason Epstein for Arts and Letters. In 1952, while a young editor at Doubleday, he created Anchor Books, effectively launching the "paperback revolution" and establishing the trade paperback format. Until that time, all books were printed in hard cover.

In 1990, after co-founding the The New York Review of Books, he created the Library of America, the prestigious publisher of American Classics and the Readers Catalogue, a precursor to on-line book selling. For many years the editorial director of Random House, he was the first recipient of the National Book Award for Distinguished Service to American Letters and was given the Curtis Benjamin Award by the Association of American Publishers for "inventing new kinds of publishing and editing." He has edited many well-known novelists, including Norman Mailer, Vladimir Nabokov, E.L. Doctorow, Philip Roth and Gore Vidal as well as many important writers of non-fiction.

Guild Hall of East Hampton is a center for the arts and entertainment and a community educational institution whose primary focus is to inform, inspire and enrich its many diverse audiences by presenting programs of the highest quality in the visual and performing arts. NCE UPON A TIME there was a dog named Sherlock Holmes. He was a beloved big brother to two human boys, best friend second to none to the boy's mother and loyal companion to their father. He was such an essential part of this family; not one of its members could imagine a world without him. When he was diagnosed with an incurable intestinal disease they were devastated.

Then, they happened upon a licensed veterinarian who also practiced holistic medicine. This alternative approach was radically different but it offered hope for their canine son's recovery where previously there had been none. Part of the new regimen featured a natural diet. Holmes' commercial dog food was replaced with raw lean meats, fresh vegetables and grains to name just a few of the items. He loved these home cooked meals, but there was something missing; his treats. Holmes was a treat connoisseur but unfortunately there did not appear to be a treat on the market that offered the nutrients his body craved with a taste his palate demanded. Finally, after much searching, the parents realized there was only one way to get a tasty, healthy treat that would compliment the natural diet their eldest son was thriving on and that was to make one themselves. So they did...

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

POLITICS

President Harry Truman said that if you want to live like a Republican, you should vote Democratic. There are some automotive analogies in this tongue-in-cheek comment. Let me explain.

There are certain cars that just look like the occupants are Republican, while others signal Democrat. Conventional wisdom dictates Republicans drive big impressive automobiles, while Democrats tool around in smaller, user-friendly compact cars. Take, for instance, the imposing cars built by Daimler Benz. They have always had a Republican image. In the 1930s DB produced a model that was so large it was called the Grosser.They then made an even more powerful version called the Keiserwagen. History repeats itself, because today the Mercedes S Class cars are some of the finest, fastest, biggest and most expensive cars on the planet. Potentate cars with a Republican bent. Why is it in Europe they all have a circled "D" on their trunks. Shouldn't it be an "R"? Note: Yes I know, the "D" stands for Deutchland.

Those prewar Mercedes are among the most collectable and valuable cars ever.(The supercharged SSK convertible models are worth millons of dollars.)

The point of all of the above is that if you want to look Republican, drive a big Benz. Note I said big. The baby Benzes, like the 190 and 230 are definitely Democrats' cars.

Additional note: I've noticed that whenever the Pope appears in public, he's in the back of a specially built glass enclosed Mercedes Jeep (Galendelwagen). This is a Mercedes sold only in Europe, which is actually constructed by Styer-Puch in Austria. I've often wondered why the Pope is not seen in an Italian product, like a large Fiat or Alfa-Romeo 164. Does he know he looks like a Republican?

Speaking of German cars, there was one guy who designed and built bipartisan machines. His name was Dr. Ferdinand Porsche. He designed the massive Tiger tank "R" the most powerful tank used in WW2, and then went on to design the diminutive Volkswagen Bug, definitely "D".

Dr. Porsche always proclaimed he wasn't political. I believe him. His delicate and tiny Porsche sports cars certainly appealed to both Republicans and Democrats.

Politically, the Hamptons are confusing. During the summer months, the highways are cluttered with Republican cars that I know are driven by Democrats. What gives? Why are all these New York liberal Democrats driving Big Benzes and 7 series BMWs? Has Hampton's peer group pressure made them step beyond party imagery? A lesson can be learned here. If you want to appear to be a powerful Republican, buy a large used Mercedes. Here's a trick. Buy a clean used 350 SE sedan, and replace the 350 SE logo on the trunk with one that says 560SEL. Instant status. (Note: This is common practice in Europe. So much so that Mercedes even helps you. The factory dealerships in Europe will sell you a new Mercedes with no logo on the trunk! A pick-your-own status policy!)

The one type of vehicle that is confusing everybody are the SUVs. It seems to be everyman's car (truck?). They're big and brassy and suck fuel so Republican oilmen love 'em. However, they also appeal to the green party because of their off road capability, and their ability to take one into tree hugging country. Then we have the NRA extremists who use them to go hunting.

The SUV is the one vehicle that crosses party lines, although I have to admit the Range Rover, Lincoln Navigator, Toyota Land Cruiser and AM General Hummer are closet Republican rides.

Perhaps that's the real subconscious appeal of these machines.Forget the fact that they all have all-wheel drive.Ignore the reality of sitting up high with virtually a bird's eye view of the highway. Pay no attention that your 5,000 pound ride gets 12 miles per gallon in traffic. And what did it cost? 25, 35, 45, 60 thousand dollars? Yikes.

None of this should matter, because when you're caught in traffic on Montauk Highway, and you make eye contact with the driver in the car alongside you, he'll not know if you're a Republican or a Democrat.

The way things seem to be going in America, this bipartisan automotive quality may soon be as important as ABS brakes and airbags.

Bob Gelber, an automotive journalist living in the Hamptons, appears frequently on television as an automotive expert. You can email him at remsenburg@aol.com

Little Lucy's also on Jobs Lane is inviting you to bring your favorite pooch to visit Santa this Saturday, December 16, from 1 to 3 p.m. Yes, there will be a photographer there to snap that Kodak moment. For information call 287-2352.

Collette's designer resale has come to town. A new store on Jobs Lane in Southampton is offering some of the best in gently used designer and vintage clothing. Also, Collette's In joining up with the Art Farm for a toy drive with donations that will be distributed to children in local shelters. Call 516-848-9033 for information.

Happy Holidays
'Tis the season...

At Tate's Bake Shop on North Sea Road in Southampton you can order all your holiday pies, cookie platters, brownies, gingerbread men, corporate gifts and party packages. Why bake? Tate's can do it for you.

Have you been to Double Rainbow at the Citarella Plaza in Water Mill yet? Well, get in your one horse open sleigh and check out their high quality toys including Lego sets and projects like robotics sets, Thomas the tank engine and friends, Brio, Gund products, trains and accessories, puzzles, games, gift baskets, classical pedal cars and ride-on toys. They also have a complete line of cards, calendars and stationery along with a huge selection of unique candies, which includes one of the largest selections of Godiva Chocolates. Open seven days a week, with plenty of parking, Grace and Bruce invite you to see a little bit of heaven for children of all ages. For information please call them at 726-2582.

If you've been looking for those hard to find binoculars and scopes, look no further. At Wild Bird Crossing in the Bridgehampton Commons you will find them along with great bird feeders, baths, books, videos, gourmet seed and one of the largest selections of Woodstock wind chimes. For only $20, a unique surprise gift is the special outdoor tree decorating kit that comes in a big red box filled with an array of decorations for your wildlife tree that will feed the birds this winter.

There is a "Winter Holiday Sale" going on at the Agway store on Snake Hollow Road in Bridgehampton with tons of feathered friend favorites, snow removal merchandise, pet toys and products and live Christmas trees and wreaths.

East Hampton's Guild Hall Gift Shop is once again doing their special Christmas carasby pomegranate, fascinating iron balance Santa's, wonderful art activity sets, award winning children's books, collectors metal wind-up toys, magnetic chess and checkers sets. Hurry for your retro love testers and go-go boxes, which are their new rage for 2000. And, gift-wrapping, of course. This lovely tiny ship is filled to the rafters with treasures for your gift giving holiday.

Looking for a perfect last minute gift for "hard-to-but-for skiiers? The Port Jeff Ferry may have an answer. This year the ferry suggests a "Ferry Gift Certificate" for a same day skiing trip to Mt. Snow, Jiminy Peak or Berkshire East. The same day trip includes a round trip ferry, motor coach from Connecticut to the ski location and a lift ticket. Rentals are not included. Tickets are $60 per-person and gift certificates are available right now. Call 631-473-5138.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Holiday Shopping!

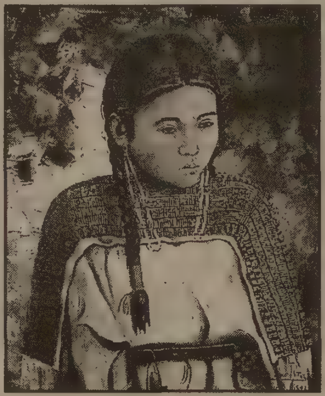
ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

LEONARD PELTIER AT RED BARN ATELIER

Much has been written and seen about Leonard Peltier through the years: news stories, books and documentaries defending Mr. Peltier's involvement with a shoot-out at Wounded Knee and the subsequent death of two FBI agents. While in prison for almost twenty-five years, Mr. Peltier has turned to art as a primary means of expression.

Mr. Peltier's exhibit at The Red Barn Atelier, "Freedom Paintings," is a fascinating one when seen in this controversial context. That it can be called "outsider art" is still another intriguing issue which may or may not impact on the quality of the work. We tend to expect less from outsider art which has been created by an untrained individual who is often "impaired" in some way—emotionally or physically handicapped or from a minority segment of the population.



Leonard Peltier's "Waiting"

As an imprisoned Native American, Mr. Peltier would probably fit the connotation of an "outsider" artist. Thus, we appreciate his art despite the fact that we haven't applied strict formal standards to his endeavors.

Believing that Mr. Peltier should be pardoned supplies another reason why Mr. Peltier's art could be described as valuable. Admittedly that opinion (held by this critic as well) is a subjective one, but such is life. From a contextual perspective, therefore, we find much of Mr. Peltier's work praiseworthy indeed.

Even so, there's another perspective that's just as compelling, one based more on "objectivity." When comparing Mr. Peltier's work with another Native American contemporary artist, Edgar Bird-in-Hand, we see that not all Native American artists are outsiders nor do they all offer testimonials to their cultural traditions, thus inspiring respect as Mr. Peltier does. Mr. Bird-in-Hand, for example, is an abstract artist whose work is aesthetically arresting as it is also passionate and personal.

Conversely, Mr. Peltier's portraits of Native American men and women, mostly attired in traditional dress, are every bit as passionate, but not as aesthetically meaningful in this critic's opinion. Mr. Peltier does have a real talent for both facial expressions and a sense of the moment which cannot be denied, however. His "Parole Denied" piece, the only abstract work in the exhibition, is the most appealing and moving. We yearn to see more of this kind of expression.

Mr. Peltier's works will be on view at The Red Barn Atelier in Southampton (88 North Main Street) until January 16, 2001. Tel. 631-287-3747.

HONORING THE ARTIST: JOHN HAUBRICK

John Haubrick's East Hampton home is undergoing some structural changes as a studio is added to the contemporary residence that provides a getaway from stressful New York City. Such alteration provides a metaphor for Mr. Haubrick's own continuing transformation in his art.

"I used to paint more 'tightly,' more objectively," Mr. Haubrick explains, sitting at his cozy kitchen table, surrounded by his works. We see what he means. Brightly colored scenes dominate the wall: a lone car parked in front of a house in Palm Springs; a grain elevator in Minnesota. The works are crisp, clean and detailed. Objective.

More recently, another style has prevailed representing a distinct change for Mr. Haubrick: a two-hundred year old Bridgehampton barn; a landscape from Town Line Road (on this week's cover of Dan's Papers). Such pieces evoke a sense of the "Old Masters," according to the artist, a sense of "mood and atmosphere." "Maybe the style change is a result of bad eyesight," Mr. Haubrick laughs.

Change is not particularly foreign to Mr. Haubrick. Growing up in Minnesota, he moved to Florida where he was a free-lance graphic artist (talk about climate extremes). Then he was off to Denver during the 1980s where he worked in advertsing, then back to Minnesota. He finally made a permanent move to New York and East Hampton. "I only have a week off in the summer to come out here," Mr. Haubrick notes, laughing again.

Changes have occured in Mr. Haubrick's career as well. "I have waited on tables and worked for a caterer," he continues. "I even worked for CBS -TV, doing graphic design for the Time 100 series." Mr. Haubrick is too modest to stress the fact that he won an award for his work on the series.

Mr. Haubrick has finally found his niche, however, working in public relations for educational institutions, first at New York University, and now at Rockefeller University where he is an art director/designer.

In the meantime, Mr. Haubrick continues to grow, presently taking a graphics course at Pratt Institute; he's even considering enrollling in an acting course at Bay Street Theatre ("I used to act and was going to go into musical theatre at one point," he admits.) Traveling is another favorite pursuit. "St. Petersberg is more beautiful than Paris," he can't help but mention enthusiastically.

"I feel fulfilled," Mr. Haubrick remarks just as enthusiastically. "I can go to a creative job and be creative and then come home and paint."

–Marion Wolberg Weiss

Mr. Haubrick's paintings can be seen at Chrysalis Gallery in Southampton.

Amahl and the Night Visitors at SH High School

Last Friday, December 8, Opera of the Hamptons, in collaboration with Southampton's School District and Boces, presented two performances of Gian-Carlo Menotti's Amahl and The Night Visitors at Southampton High School. The Southampton School District hosted the student performance and a performance that was open to the public.

Opera of the Hamptons salutes Mr. Richard C. Malone, Superintendent of the Southampton School District, who has been the driving force in keeping the arts in the school curriculum. Mr. Malone was the first person in the Hamptons to encourage Opera of the Hamptons to be a viable part of community life on the East End.

Opera of the Hamptons presents international artists mezzo soprano Barbara Giancolo, tenor Richard Slade, baritone Timothy Hill, bass Alexander Barton-Page, with Music Director Rachael Salzano and Stage Director Franco Gentilesca and featuring Southampton eighth grader Rachel Goodale as "Amah" and eleventh grader Edward Shimkus as the "Page." The shepherds, villagers and dancers are members of the Southampton High School and Intermediate Chorus and the Southampton High School band also participated. Ms. Betty Jean Townsend, Ms. Ann Sutton, Mr. Paul Pickul, Ms. Julia Best, Ms. Susan Rumph, Ms. Joann Luongo, working cooperatively with the Opera of the Hamptons, have prepared the students for this production.

Stage Director Franco Gentileca has directed numerous productions of Amahl and the Night Visitors, including the Broadway run at the Anta Theatre. Mr. Gentilesca was assistant to Mr. Menotti, and to Luchino Visconti and Roman Polanski as well. He assisted Mr. Menotti in various productions of The Consul, The Saint of Bleecker Street, The Medium, The Telephone and Help, Help, The Globelinks.

When Gian-Carlo Menotti was expressly commissioned by NBC to compose a first opera for television, his inspiration came from the painting by Hieronymus Bosch of the Adoration of the Magi, which brought back memories of his childhood. The charm and magical qualities of Amah captures all our childhood memories, delights children of all ages and renews the hope of miracles for all of us.

Guy de Fraumeni's HOLLYWOOD in The Hamptons

Proof Of Life

THERE'S LIFE IN THE OLD TOWN YET

Our good old towns appear to be holding their own folksy Christmas spirits with old-fashioned decor of multi-colored lights, as opposed to icy, tiny, white-only chic . . . just as in fighting the good fight against Hollywood's Grauman's Chinese facades of plastered offensiveness. Inside our theatres, however, it's another eye-battering story of rococo clashes . . . as if to assure us that our night will not be so silent.

DEATH DOESN'T TAKE A HOLIDAY ON SCREEN

Added proof of this is Proof of Life, Russell Crowe's return to the bloodied arena where Hollywood fights its relentless battle against evil and quietude at their box offices because the youth market might be nestled at home watching a DVD tape of Die Hard, the stupidly stupendous, X-Mass Market attraction. Crowe seems glad to be gladiating again and kind of glad to meet Meg Ryan in one of the many agitated, trigger-glad, Latin American countries, where one ugly anti-government faction has kidnapped, for a $3 million ransom, her engineer husband who has been helping to build a dam. He is enacted by David Morse with a strongly substantial performance that adds considerable weight to the already quite sturdy story . . . even as his own physical weight diminishes drastically.

INSURANCE COMPANIES REQUIRE PROOF OF LIFE AS WELL AS DEATH

Let us not reduce Crowe's burly, unshaven strength as a presence and delineated characterization of a professional "K&R" (kidnap and ransom) negotiator for the insurance company liable for the mucho dinero. Along with his side-kick, buddy, all 'round super-duper heroic pal, played with mercenary dagger-swagger by David Caruso, the duo do daring stuff to save the day, the engineer and the swag. And they're doing it for the fun of it or, the Red, White and Blue of it or... maybe, for Meg! You see, the engineer/victim's company couldn't keep up the insurance payments..

HOLLYWOOD STAR LEADS WISE MEN ASTRAY

Alas, and, oh, my stars! more unfortunate, the most clanging conflict is between the fashion conscious Meg, whose scruffy, tousle-topped,thin tank-topped, thin widdle bod' wiggle, crying out to People magazine is completely at odds with Mr. Crowe's solid, plain, lead pipe rack, forceful style which is more in keeping with the movie's own sometimes documentary . . . sometimes thriller . . . based on a survivor's auto-biography and a Vanity Fair article on K&R and how the kidnapped and their family and rescuers can come out alive. Not so lucky for the film industry where the stars hold the movie captive. Meg's cuddly winsomeness causes the film to lose some.

Dear Santa: Jim Carrey is still holding Dr. Suess and Christmas Hostage.

MAYOR KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

Best In Show (+)

This film consists of a series of very funny cameos, and is worth seeing. Indeed, there is no real plot, only vignettes strung together.

The film makes us privy to the relationships between dog owners and their dogs. It reminded me of the relationship I had with my dog many years ago. It was a beautiful and highly intelligent boxer that I brought back from Germany after WW II. In those days, the Army shipped dogs owned by soldiers back to the US for $85.

The people who own the dogs in this movie are all interesting and very funny. One of the first couples we meet, Hamilton (Michael Hitchcock) and Meg Swan (Parker Posey), are nuts. In one scene, they tell their psychiatrist that their dog Beatrice was shocked because she saw the couple engaged in sex, doggy style.

Another couple we meet, Gerry (Eugene Levy) and Cookie (Catherine O'Hara) have a Norwich terrier, which at least to this viewer, is the least attractive of all the truly beautiful dogs displayed in the show. Gerry literally has two left feet. His wife Cookie claims that she has had hundreds of lovers. We meet some of them.

A third couple is homosexual: Scott Donlan (John Michael Higgins) and Stephan Vanderhoof (Michael McKean). Scott is very effeminate and very funny. The characterization should not offend homosexual members of the audience because it is never demeaning and Scott conquers all. Scott's lover Stephan is much more sedate.

The script devotes equal time to a lesbian affair between Sherri Ann Ward Cabot (Jennifer Coolidge) and Christy Cummings (Jane Lynch). Coolidge and Lynch do a terrific job in creating these characters.

The film shows other couples as well, and they were all hilarious and depicted with brilliant acting. It is not a memorable film, but will provide an evening of good fun.

La Buche (+)

This is an extremely interesting film. Each of the main characters has a secret, and these secrets are unknown to most members of their family.

The family originally consisted of Stanislas (Claude Rich), his wife Yvette (Françoise Fabian), and their three daughters. But Stanislas and Yvette have been divorced for twenty-five years. The three daughters love their parents, but also see their faults.

Louba (Sabine Azéma), who is forty-two, is the oldest daughter. She is a cabaret singer.

The middle daughter, Sonia (Emmanuelle Béart) is very beautiful. She is apparently the most successful, at least as far as having money is concerned, and has a family. But we also learn that her husband is unfaithful and they are splitting.

Milla (Charlotte Gainsbourg) is the youngest, and is a waif. She is very unhappy and unable to connect with anyone.

We learn that Louba has had an affair with a married man for twelve years and is now pregnant, but he will not leave his wife.

Milla is convinced that she will never find a lover, but is suddenly interested in a young man who lives in an annex at her father's house. He is living apart from his wife and two children.

The film opens with Yvette leading a funeral procession to the cemetery for her deceased second husband. She has purposely not invited the deceased's mistress to the funeral. During the internment, a cell phone rings. The phone is in the casket.

I could go on and tell you about the many interesting secrets each of the characters have, but of course I wont. Suffice it to say that some of these secrets are very funny, particularly when revealed by Yvette's first husband Stanislas (Claude Rich). He is now a retired violinist with heart problems. In one particularly poignant and hilarious scene with Yvette, he reveals his indiscretions. And she reveals hers.

The entire film is very French, except the soundtrack which is overwhelmingly composed of American Christmas songs, some of which are sung by Bing Crosby. Perhaps the reason for using this music is to make you think that nothing is what it seems.

You will like this movie. The last song is played at the Russian cabaret, where Louba is performing "My Yiddisher Momma." Oh, I forgot to tell you, adding to the quirkiness of the film is that the fact that Papa was a Jewish Russian refugee.

As I waited to go to into the theater, a charming raffishly dressed woman with a wonderful looking gamine cap, came over to me and said: "I am a French Jew and loved this movie. I'll be interested to read your review. I did not agree with your negative review of Il Positano."

I responded: "That was years ago and you were probably right."

If she is reading this review, she should know that she is right again. This is a fine movie.

She-Devil

HELL HATH NO FURY LIKE A STORMY WRONGED LONG ISLAND WOMAN

Long Island women! Wow! When crossed by slime bag men, they can bring down houses more vehemently than a hurricane-fed tornado . . . or, bring down the house with laughter, as in the case of producer/director Susan Seidelman's 1989 film, SHE-DEVIL, from the novel by Fay Weldon which ignited a British TV mini-series. Whether the woman is a full-time wife, mother and totally unliberated (this is 1989) maintenance person of a house she calls a home in a development, smack in the middle of the middle class and the Island or, a fabulous, wealthy author of Romance novels, as well as a most-of-the-time oversexed devourer of men, living in a palace-like mansion on the monied dunes of the Eastern End of the Island.. . . they both are too tough to mess with. Be careful. Be very, very careful. The malicious laughs they produce can hurt you a whole lot.

Watch out for Meryl Streep, she is sleek, gorgeously pink and poisonous as the ultra successful writer of palpitating, pulp-porn fiction. She is hilariously outrageous in the broad, comedic performance of her career. She alone is worth the price of admission. What in the world am I blathering? There is no admission price for Dan's Papers' "Movies Made Here" Festival Presentations. It's all free . . . the comfort of the Ross School Library with snacks and juices and soft leather extravagance. Be there . . . its the last screening of this season. And, it's GOO-OOD!

Roseanne Barr, as a cheated-on, then deserted housewife, is in her past incarnation as a look-alike Elizabeth Taylor at her Blimpy best but, with a really ugly hairy mole in place of Taylor's big, beauty spot. Roseanne spares nothing. She manages TOTAL, wicked-hatred when her no-account accountant, played with long blonde hair and a tall, skinny, bare behind by, Ed Begley, Jr., leaves her for the rich, thin, (shaped-by- expensive-massages), loins of Meryl Streep. Roseanne's clutzy-wifey takes tons of abuse and pain from her grubby-hubby Begley and scene and husband stealer Meryl. But, only to a point. A sharp point.

It all starts when the three meet at a Guggenheim Museum party. Meryl and Begley's eyes meld! Roseanne spills a drink . . . on them. Begley drives Meryl home . . . all the way! Meryl slips into something comfy. They have champagne in front of the fire. They snuggle. Her hand falls between his legs. The heat isn't only in the fireplace. He doesn't get home. Roseanne's life, with her two children, gets more and more grotesque to the final humiliation. Ed is finally forever Meryl's. With her sexy house boy, (A. Martinez) and two grand dogs (Poodle and Borzoi) their days are full of chiffon perversion and Roseanne's days and nights are devilishly vengeful. She doesn't just get mad, she (as they say on TV) gets even . . . even madder.

While the kids are away, Roseanne (AKA. the SHE DEVIL) utilizes every household appliance to systematically destroy their house. From then on, just as systematically, she devises clever plot after plot to demolish the luxurious lives of her two mortal enemies. A few examples: She foists her (and Ed's) children on the sodomy, sodden couple. Then Meryl's old Momma (Sylvia Miles) gets tossed into the mix. Then, a vamp secretary, flung by Roseanne, into Begley's already corrupted office . . . and ultimately, the infernal Internal Revenue Service. Oh! Roseanne is such a devil! She has been (all the while) rebuilding her own life and deconstructing that mole. But, gosh . . . the destruction! The Suffolk Film Council is still rueing the day they allowed Ms. Seidelman to film out here.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

Hot, sour, salty and sweet indicate the different flavors we experience in the foods we eat. When Jeffrey Alford and Naomi Duguid, award winning cook book authors (Seductions of Rice and Flatbread and Flavors) set out on a culinary journey through Southeast Asia they captured a unique blend of travelogue, photojournalism and flavors for their latest book, Hot, Sour, Salty and Sweet.

This fascinating new cookbook (Artisan, $40, division of Workman Publishing) is an extraordinary read and a picturesque journey along the Mekong River, a river that runs from Southern China threading its way down through Burma, Laos, Thailand, Vietnam and Cambodia where it spills into the South China Sea-regions, the authors consider to be a major influence in the now and future cooking scene.

It is as much a story about people as it is about their food. "Southeast Asia is one of the oldest inhabited regions in the world, and over a very long time, a great many different peoples have settled, conquered, and trickled into the region." So too are the regional differences in their foods while sharing a common palate. The amazing broad range of recipes in Hot, Sour, Salty and Sweet, are written with clear, concise instructions. For the uninitiated there is a useful glossary of flavorings with brief instructions for dry-roasting ingredients such as peanuts and sesame seeds, combining spice mixtures and/or pickling garlic, cabbage and chilies.

An appealing dish is the classic mixed vegetable stir-fry from Thailand, made with the addictive Thai fish sauce and fermented soybean paste. Pad Thai, the classic stir-fried noodle dish is ambitious, but it is a substantial "meal-in-a-bowl." Bananas in coconut cream, a snack in Southeast Asia, is a simple home-style pudding. With a sprinkle of golden sesame seeds it makes a festive holiday desert.

CLASSIC MIXED VEGETABLE STIR FRY

Be sure your wok is very hot for this perfect marriage of wok and ingredients.

Serves 4 with rice

2 tablespoons peanut or vegetable oil
2 cloves garlic, smashed
1/2 pound napa cabbage cut crosswise into 1/2-inch strips
1/4 pound snow peas (about 1 1/2 cups)
1/4 pound mushrooms, cleaned and sliced (about 1 1/2 cups)
1 tablespoon Thai fish sauce
1 tablespoon fermented soybean paste
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper, or to taste

1. Heat a large wok over high heat. Add the oil and swirl gently to coat. When the oil is hot, toss in the garlic and stir-fry until starting to turn golden. Add all the vegetables and stir-fry until starting to soften, about 1 1/2 to 2 minutes. Add the fish sauce, cover and cook for 2 minutes. Add the soybean paste and stir-fry briefly to mix well, then turn out onto a plate. Season with black pepper and serve.

PAD THAI CLASSIC STIR-FRIED NOODLES

"Pad Thai" literally means "Thai Fry," and it is the dish many foreigners think of first when they think about Thai food.

Serves 3-4 as main dish

Condiments and accompaniments
1 cup chili-vinegar sauce*
Cayenne pepper
Sugar (optional)
1/2 to 1 European cucumber, thinly sliced
1 small head lead lettuce, washed, dried and separated into leaves, optional
1 lime cut into small wedges

For the noodles:
2 ounces boneless pork, thinly sliced, and cut into narrow strips, about 1 1/2 inches long
1 teaspoon sugar
1 heaping tablespoon tamarind pulp, dissolved in 2-3 tablespoons warm water, and pressed through a sieve, or substitute 1 tablespoon rice vinegar plus 1 table spoon water
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1 tablespoon Thai fish sauce
3 large eggs
Pinch salt
3 tablespoons peanut or vegetable oil
2-3 cloves garlic, minced
1 cube (2-3 ounces) pressed tofu, cut into narrow 1 and 1/2-inch long strips
1/2 pound narrow, dried rice noodles, soaked in warm water for 20 minutes and drained 1/2 pound (scant 4 cups) bean sprouts, rinsed and drained
3 scallions, trimmed, smashed flat with the side of a cleaver, cut into 1
1/2-inch lengths
1 tablespoon dried shrimp
1 cup dry-roasted peanuts, coarsely shopped
2-4 tablespoons coriander leaves, optional

1. Before you begin cooking, place the chili vinegar sauce on the table as a condiment, along with a small condiment plate of cayenne and another small bowl of sugar if you wish. Arrange the cucumber slices around the edge of your serving platter or individual plates, together with the lettuce leaves, if using, and lime wedges.

2. Place the pork in a small bowl, add the sugar, and toss to mix. In a medium bowl, mix together the tamarind (or rice vinegar mix), soy sauce and fish sauce. In a small bowl, lightly beat the eggs with the salt. Place all the ingredients by your stovetop.

3. Place a large wok over high heat. Add about 1 1/2 tablespoons of the oil and, when it is hot, add the garlic and stir-fry briefly until it begins to change color, about 15 seconds. Toss the pork and stir-fry until it has changed color, 1 minute or less. Add the tofu and press it against the hot sides of the wok to scorch a little, 10-20 seconds. Pour in the egg mixture and let cook until it starts to set around the pork and tofu slices, less than 1 minute. Use your spatula to cut it into large pieces, then transfer all onto a plate and set aside.

4. Place the wok back over high heat, add remaining 1 1/2 tablespoons or so of oil, and swirl to coat. Toss the drained noodles and stir-fry vigorously, pressing them against the hot wok to sear and heat them, then turn and press them again. They will seem dry and unwieldy, but don't worry, just keep folding them over and pressing them onto the wok - after about 1 minute, they will have softened more and be warm.

5. Move the noodles up the sides of the wok and toss in 2 to 2 1/2 cups of the bean sprouts and the scallions, Stir-fry vigorously for about 20 seconds, pressing and turning to wilt them against the hot wok. Add the dried shrimp and toss briefly with your spatula, then add the soy sauce mixture. Stir-fry for about another 30 seconds, gradually incorporating noodles into the bean sprout mixture. Add the reserved egg-meat mixture and toss gently to mix everything together.

6. Turn out onto the platter or individual plates. Place remaining bean sprouts on the table. Sprinkle some of the chopped nuts on the noodles, and place the rest in a bowl for gusts to add if they wish. Sprinkle on coriander leaves if using. As they eat, guests can flavor their portions as they wish, with a sprinkling of cayenne, a squeeze of lime juice, a sprinkling of sugar, a little more chopped nuts, some bean sprouts and a drizzle of chili-vinegar sauce.

*Chili-Vinegar sauce; Dissolve 1/2 cup rice vinegar with 2-3 tablespoons sugar and add 1/2 mild chili (such as Cubanelle or banana chili), sliced into rings. Can refrigerate for up to 4-5 days.

BANANAS IN COCONUT CREAM

This simple home-style pudding is often eaten as a snack.

Serves 8

1 1/2 cups canned or fresh coconut milk
1/2 teaspoon rose water (optional)
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup sugar, or more to taste
4 regular bananas or 10 small sweet Asian bananas
1–2 tablespoons dry-roasted sesame seeds (optional)
1–2 tablespoons dry-roasted peanuts, finely chopped (optional)

1. Place the coconut in a heavy pot over medium heat, add the rose water, if using, and the salt and sugar, and stir until completely dissolved. (Can be prepared ahead up to one hour before cooking the bananas.)

2. Cut peeled bananas into bite-sized pieces. Add the bananas to the pot and cook until softened, 5 - 10 minutes, depending on the bananas that you are using and to how firm or soft you like your bananas. Serve warm or at room temperature, in small bowls, topped with sprinkled sesame seeds or chopped roasted peanuts if you wish.

Bottled Water & Vitamins = Glaceau

Are you stressed? Are you over-worked and over-tired? Need to take your vitamins? Why not drink your vitamins on your way to school or work?

An American staple – bottled water – has just become the most efficient delivery system for vitamins. Energy Brands, Inc. is introducing a first in the bottled water category: Glaceau Vitamin Water.

You may be taking vitamins every day, but if they don't break down completely in your digestive system, they aren't properly absorbed and your daily ritual is ineffective. An all-natural, vitamin-enhanced, lightly flavored beverage containing up to 250% of the RDI requirements, Glaceau Vitamin Water offers another advantage – pre-dissolved vitamins have a high bioavailablility. That means they are easier for your body to take in and use.

Glaceau Smart Water is the number two contender (just behind Evian) in the premium bottled water category. Similarly, Glaceau Vitamin Water is vapor distilled for maximum purity and then enhanced with vitamins that naturally exist in fruits and vegetables. Glaceau Vitamin Water offers vitamin supplementation through six varieties.

Glaceau Vitamin Water is pasteurized and packaged in a distinctive twenty-ounce bottle with a tamper resistant cap. Sold in health food stores, gourmet shops and health clubs, nationwide, Glaceau Vitamin Water retails for two dollars a bottle.

Also available is Glaceau Smart Water, Water Plus, Fruit Water, Soy Water and Go-Go Drinks. For information on the different types of water by Glaceau call 212-489-8585.

Green Essence For Body And Face

"Aromatherapy is the ancient science that uses pure essential oils to heal body, mind and spirit," say Calixte Stamp and Nancy DePietro, Healing Touch Practitioners in East Hampton who have recently created GREEN ESSENCE, a new and natural line of beauty and healing products. This is a very extensive line that will appeal to anyone seeking high quality natural products with therapeutic properties.

Though the official launch is planned for March 2001, GREEN ESSENCE products are available now through Nancy and Calixte's catalogue or by visiting their website. Following are some of the wonderful items you will find in both of these locations.

Face Creams:

Royal Blend: this is a cream with a primrose base containing Essential Oils of Rose and jasmine. It has a high vitamin C content and it is downright luxurious in texture. It stimulates skin elasticity and soothes irritations as it helps soften wrinkles. Royal Blend is ideal for all skin types.

Neroli Caress: neroli is extracted from flowers of the orange tree and so it has antibacterial as well as anti-infectious properties; it is also a natural tranquilizer. This cream is ideal for mature skin and combination skins.

Healing Essence: this blend combines Essential Oils of Lavender and Roman Chamomile to produce a deep healing and cleansing of the skin. This cream calms skin conditions, such as acne, and increases the ability of the skin to regenerate. It is ideal for normal to oily skin and is highly recommended for men.

Face Oil Blends

Balancing 3L Formula: this blend is for mature skin or skin with enlarged pores. Essential Oil of Lavender balances and stimulates circulation while lemon acts as an astringent and antiseptic.

Face Cleansers

Soft Lavender Cleanser: this is excellent for sensitive to dry skin. It calms, soothes and heals as a blend of Sea Salts and Minerals purify and tone your skin. It also smells heavenly!

Sweet Lemon Cleanser: this is a gentle, water-soluble cleasner that is also ideal for sensitive skin. It leaves skin feeling light and moist while it maintains pH balance. Lemon is also a natural antiseptic.

Eye Treatments

Calendula Eye Lifting Gel: this is a soothing gel that is very effective in relieving swelling and puffiness around the eyes. Calendula, along with Essential oil of Lavender, acts as an astringent while it calms any irritations. This gel will gently tighten the skin around your eyes.

Body Oil Blends

Immunostimulating Blend: this blend is a must in the medicine cabinet as garlic is a must in the kitchen for its natural antibiotic effect. Echinacea Herbal Oil combined with Jojoba Oil boost the immune system to ward off infection. It works best if massaged on the chest and lymphatic areas of the body before a hot bath or shower.

Muscle Ease: this is a therapeutic blend to help heal all kinds of joint or muscular pains. St. John's Wort is included to ease neck and back injuries and Juniper helps ease tention. It works best if massaged into painful area right before a hot bath or shower.

Bath crystals, sunscreens, body scrubs, masks and floral waters are also available through GREEN ESSENCE. These products feel increbibly pure and natural on your skin; there is nothing commercial about them. Contact Nancy and Calixte for more information by writing to them at P.O. Box 1990, East Hampton, N.Y. 11932 or by visiting their website at GreenEssOrder@aol.com.

A Tree Grows In Bridgehampton

As the holiday season approaches again, some of us consider buying a Christmas tree that we can plant outside after New Year's Day. To find out what's involved in handling a live (balled and burlapped) tree, I went to see Kevin Coffey at Marder's Nursery in Bridgehampton.

I walked into a winter wonderland during our first snowfall of the season on the day I went to visit Kevin. It felt like walking through a forest of fir trees covered with sparkling white snow, the perfect setting to inspire holiday spirit! It got even better when I went inside and found frosted glass animal ornaments, custom-made wreaths and beautiful dried flower arrangements. These arrangements can be made to order and are perfect for centerpieces. The woman who makes them, Judy Angrisani, also offers classes throughout the year. Watch our calendar at Dan's Papers for upcoming events.

I found Kevin and we went outside to look at the trees. The first thing he tells me is that it is extremely important not to keep the tree indoors for too long. "The biggest deterrent to having a live tree is that it cannot be kept in the house for longer than seven days. The tree has already gone dormant and the buds are set for the following year, so if you increase the temperature for a long period of time, the tree starts to think that its springtime and goes into active growth. Then, when you put the tree outside, it goes into shock. It's like giving the tree a heart attack!."

Kevin standing next to a 4 foot tree

Marder's Christmas Shop

The other obstacle to having a live tree with a root ball attached is that it weighs much more than a cut tree. A tree that is going to be 6 feet overall will have a root ball that is approximately 2 1/2 feet around with the actual tree being about 3 1/2 feet above the root ball. This will weigh approximately 200-250 pounds! Kevin warns not to look for a tree with an "excessively small root ball because, more then likely, the tree wasn't dug correctly" and may not survive when planted because of root damage.

If you want a small tree, it is fairly easy to handle with one or two people. A tree that will be about 5 – 5 1/2 feet overall will have a root ball about 1 1/2 feet around with a tree about 4 feet tall. This will weigh about 125 pounds and will be fairly manageable for two people. Make sure that you have a dolly or moving blankets on hand.

The first thing that you need to do is dig the hole and fill it with mulch. "Leaf mulch works well because it is easy to remove, especially if it is frozen," said Kevin. It also amends the soil with organic matter, an important step in the process. Make sure that you can dig the hole before buying the tree because the ground freezes here right around Christmas time. "If the top 2-3 inches of soil are frozen, a professional planter will still be able to dig through it but it will be very hard to get a shovel through," said Kevin.

After planting the tree, it is very important to water it in to settle the soil and eliminate air pockets. About 5 gallons is sufficient for any tree that you are able to plant yourself.

If you are going to have a tree larger than 6 feet tall (don't forget that the root ball adds another 2 feet for a total of 8 feet) it is probably a good idea to have it planted professionally. Marders offers this service for a minimum fee of $100 plus a percentage of the cost of the tree if the tree is very large. So, for example, if you want a tree that is about 6 1/2 feet overall, the tree will cost between $125-150 and an additional $100 will cover all of the services including delivery, setting the tree up in your container, and planting after Christmas. This service is well worth the expense if you are considering a large tree. Marders is extremely careful so that your wood floors and carpets are not damaged in any way.

Trees

Marders sells both fir and spruce trees for planting, but Kevin said that "spruce is a better choice when you are applying the tree to your landscape. A spruce is more tolerant to our winds and they are also very deer resistant."

It is very important to consider location when you purchase your tree. A cute little 3 foot tree will eventually grow into a 30 footer! Also, both spruce and firs require medium to full sun.

If after reading this, you decide to buy a cut tree, take consolation in the fact that these trees are grown on huge tree farms in Canada and, Kevin adds, "these farms have been in business for generations and from an environmental point of view, it's not a horrible thing. The trees aren't being cleared to build strip malls."

So enjoy your tree with a clear conscience, whichever direction you choose.

HOMEWORK HELL

Homework is the pits. Or, at least, it can be. Though few can dispute the merits of homework, many can vouch for the heartaches and headaches that often accompany this after-school obligation. Shortcuts, hints, and tutoring abound, but unfortunately come at a price. Check out these free homework resources on the web; because time is a precious commodity for everyone; students, parents, and teachers alike. A warning: Use your time on the web productively; for homework help, not for procrastination.

K-8

www.bigchalk.com- Whether a student at the elementary, secondary, or high school level, your homework woes have been answered. Tutorials in almost any subject imaginable, research paper help, and practice tests are just a few of the learning aids available.

www.discoveryschool.com- Aimed at the younger crowd, the Discovery Network's School channel makes English, Social Studies, Science and Math engaging experiences, rather than dry subjects. Enhance school projects with free graphics from the clip art library.

www.lightspan.com- "Online learning for school and home." The "Global Schoolhouse" is very entertaining for young children, providing a forum for students to share their experiences, such as field trips and classroom projects.

www.schoolwork.org- A true homework-helper site, "Schoolwork Ugh" will link you to the information you are looking for, whether it be politics, drugs, or quotations. Still haven't found the information you need? Email the librarian for a response within 48 hours.

HIGH SCHOOL

www.dailygrammar.com- Let's face it. We could all use some grammar lessons. Sign up for "Daily Grammar," a free email service. Receive grammar lesson emails five days a week and a quiz on the sixth day.

www.babylon.com- Make your first step on this site the downloading of the Babylon freeware; a translator, dictionary, and converter that is made instantly available with the click of your mouse or the touch of your keyboard. Give it a try and learn quickly why this tool is invaluable.

www.encarta.com- Free access to a notable atlas, encyclopedia, and dictionary is what encarta.com offers along with links to homework-help resources and free language learning.

http://mathforum.com/dr.math/- Though not flashy or technically impressive, this site is worth a visit if you are one the many who struggle through mathematics. Dr. Math is a team of Swarthmore College students who volunteer their time and expertise by answering math stumpers.

COLLEGE

www.pinkmonkey.com- Designed for junior high, high school, and college students, this site is a free resource providing a large library of summaries of literary works. Another great feature of the site is the number of Classics that are available for reading or downloading.

www.sparknotes.com- Looking for your basic overview of a range of topics? Written by Harvard students and graduates, you can count on getting the clear and accurate information you need on subjects such as economics, psychology, and Shakespeare.

www.howtostudy.com- The transition from high school to college can be tough, especially in the area of time management. This site has the inside scoop on how to manage stress, train your memory, and effectively study.

Light my fire... But not with stolen wood. An East Hampton thief is lighting his fire with someone else's wood. For the third time this year a President's Road resident told police wood had been stolen from her home. This theft was for a half a cord.

* * *

On Fireplace Road, a house under construction had a bathtub theft. The tub was brand new and had not yet been installed. Not exactly easy to fit in the back seat....

* * *

Another "water crime." Approximately fifteen outdoor fish in a manmade pond on (where else?) Swamp Road in East Hampton were stolen. The pilferred fish consisted of one Japanese flying fish and various carp and goldfish. There was official speculation that the fish might not simply have been stolen but eaten, by an animal. But the owner of the premises suspects human thievery as there have been items stolen from the residence in the past.

* * *

When attorneys need attorneys. Hampton Bays attorney Stephan D. Siegfried has been charged with stealing $1 million from the estate of Helene M. Gibney of Southampton. The Sufffolk D.A.'s office said that the attorney stole the money from the estate's accounts from July, 1996 to February, 1999. The executrix of the Gibney estate had hired Siegfried to get the estate ready for probate. The Sufffolk D.A.'s white collar crime unit had begun to investigate Siegfried after complaints from some of his clients. Barry Feldman, an attorney who practices in Southampton Village, is representing Mr. Siegfried and says his client is highly respected in the community.

The night manager at the North Main Street IGA in East Hamptopn was leaving the store at the end of business hours one evening when an unknown attacker knocked him to the ground and stole the night deposits as he and a coworker neared the parking lot. The manager reports that he never got a look at the assailant. He also told police he does not know if he was struck with an instrument or an elbow. The deposit bag contained $18,357.54: $11,446.50 in cash and $6,911.04 in checks. Police, along with a K-9 officer and dog, conducted an extensive search of the scene but could find no suspects or the missing loot.

* * *

The Old, The Tall, and the Missing. On Appaloosa Court, East Hampton, a tree thief made off with a bonsai, fifty years old and a fourteen foot crab apple tree.

* * *

The superintendent of the East Hampton Golf Club reported that two golf carts had been driven up and down six fairways and three greens along the north side of the gofl course, incurring damage that could not be fully assessed due to the recently fallen snow. The super says he will file a more complete report with the thaw.

* * *

Joggers beware. Do you hog the road, not give due respect to multi-ton (or smaller) vehicles that can kill you? A jogger on Sagg Road in Bridgehampton believes she was intentionally hit by a car that had been forced off the road to avoid her about twenty minutes earlier. The jogger was treated for minor injuries at Southampton Hospital. Police are are the lookout for a small black sports car, late model. Apparently the car had not just gone off the road to avoid the jogger but had run into a stand of bushes.

Was it G.I. Joe? A WWII Navy Survival Kit along with other items was stolen from an antique dealer who had come out from Port Washington to ply his wares at an antique show at the Birdgehampton Community House. The items were valued at $1,300.

Dan's LETTERS

GREAT MILEAGE?

Dear Dan,

Once again I salute your efforts at saving the Plovers, Linda Scott's Stargazer and all those Potato Runs for good causes. And an imagination that never seems to run down. Must be in the genes or whatever your laptop digests down at the beach. Whatever the answer, you do get great mileage, like my Insight by Honda. On one tankful you may ride from NYC to Detroit, doing the speed limit! And getting attention paid as my poem spells out.

DRIVING GREEN

1. My Insight, like a good Cabernet, will improve with age... car model unveiled at the Moma opened a dialogue... do we drive green for planet's health flooded in oxidants... do business as usual facing extinction... electric rejected to fade away in the grey.

2. Little car alone on the highways and byways... oft thumbs-up and salutes... its soft engine's purring revved—up to roll out... smart little Insight shouts, "Notice!Notice me! I'm driving green!"

3. Lloyd Weber's passion for well–aged wine, art, the good life, all sectored by smash runs on Broadway's lesson Insight teaches... long runs save the green!

BY: e.e. de'pazzi

To be read at the WINTER SOLSTICE, December 17, at the Clayton & Liberatore Gallery, 4-5 p.m. with Wm. Hathaway, Dan Giancola and Scott Chasky reading. Do come and think GREEN. Holiday Greetings in poetry,

Ellen de'Pazzi
Bridgehampton

ANYTHING GOES

Dear Dan,

It goes against my personal policy to ever comment on a play review that involves myself, but this is in regard to your reviewer Helga Morpurgo in her review of Anything Goes at the Southampton College. Ms. Morpurgo, first, thank you. Your wonderful review was truly appreciated by the entire cast and crew, and I'm sure it put additional fannies in the seats for our second weekend. But when you wrote "set designer John Zaleski created a remarkable set..." may I gently note that I should not have gotten all the credit. The entire look, feel, and classy polish of this production was the brainchild of Director Michael Disher. Mr. Disher and I met in July, poured over a few sketches, and the goal was to make it happen. He was there every night, of course, and was tapped for creative nudges and even more creative problem solving during construction.

As noted in the program, I shared these duties with Chris Lombardo (who also designed the lighting). Chris and I put in hundreds of hours building this bitch from the ground up, forming a healthy competition to achieving this common goal, and toward the end providing each other with motivation when we were too tired to barely walk. Also thank you to Jackie Townsend, who in addition to her full–time duties as Wardrobe Mistress, found the time to fine–tune a myriad of detail work. And of course to the 28 students who, when they weren't schlepping the heavy stuff, were often given but one choice: paint brush or roller. They did a remarkable job.

Thank you again Helga Morpurgo for your generous and timely review of Anything Goes. And thank you, Dan, for your paper and this forum. Thanks to the thousands who came out and enjoyed this production, and for those who couldn't make it, you missed a good one. See you in the Spring!

John Zaleski
